Hopi Ear Candling

Deborah Casey

Calm Oasis Holistic Therapy

IICT approved training school

You can create your very own therapy space in your own home. Be mindful of health and safety and local regulations and by-laws. Should you wish to provide therapy for payment then professional education and training is required to obtain insurance and membership into a recognised body for holistic therapists. This course manual aims to supplement any professional level learning the reader chooses to take. Calm Oasis Holistic Therapy is now an approved training school with the highly respected International Institute of Complimentary Therapists.

We are personally responsible for our own health and well-being and education is the first step to improving our health and well-being. As a therapist it is part of your role to also educate your client about lifestyle changes that can support them to increase their well-being. Ultimately it is the responsibility of your client to take or leave the educational advice you provide as your main focus is providing safe and effective therapy.

Hopi ear candling with Deborah Casey

Welcome to your course manual - Hopi ear candling - which will supplement my own training course or other training course you are taking with another instructor. This course manual provides professional level learning for both personal use to share with family, friends and loved ones but is also very useful if you are thinking of participation in taking Calm Oasis Holistic Therapy home study, distance learning training or even live training. Ensure that the training you are taking is with a registered educational establishment and will support your learning outcomes. This course is aimed at students here in the UK but will be very useful for students around the world who wish to learn this modality. Or maybe you already practice Hopi ear candling and want to refresh your knowledge and skills then this course will help you with that. Students of Calm Oasis Holistic Therapy can access professional membership with the International Holistic

Choosing your training course

It can be said when it comes to choosing a massage training course that it can be immensely confusing for potential students; reading course details can make one wonder which is right and which is wrong, and who to avoid.

There are now a plethora of on line training courses that allows a student to download a manual and skip through it and the assessment is "self-assessment". This is dubious and can bring the profession of holistic, complementary and alternative therapy into disrepute as students who fly through such courses gain a diploma, insurance but no real life experience. Even home study and distance learning courses are not so thorough as a student can just read, replicate and then case studies can be made up to meet the course reading materials!

Traditional learning, in a college setting, provides structured classes, tutored learning and on-gong observation, assessment and examination. This learning is then verified by external sources which then permit accredited certification to be administered.

Essential to choosing your Hopi Ear candle training course is ensuring that what you will learn will meet occupational standards and core skills that develop your confidence and competency in your chosen therapy. Further on in this manual you will look at key areas to learning body massage - the knowledge and understanding that underpins body massage. This manual has aimed to provide information that is in line with the national occupational standards and core skills and is also research based. The manual offers various activities to help you develop your own research and learning. Though these activities are not assessed they help you develop invaluable skills.

Make a learning space...

Create a space to study, your own sacred learning space, where you can switch off to the world outside; no mobile phone, television or other distractions can interrupt your personal development and growth through learning.

Fresh flowers, water and a view from a window so that you can take pauses to reflect and ponder your learning and you can refresh your mind and feel deeper inner peace as you progress.
