Nowhere Man in Nowhere Land PSYCHIC ENTROPY NO Way Out? PART TWENTY FOUR Â JAMES RAYMOND FISHER, JR., Ph.D. Â© October 18, 2016 PLEASE NOTE: In this final segment and Afterword, we complete the commentary of the PAST IMPERFECT, PRESENT RIDICULOUS and FUTUREPERFECT. The future promises to be not only more challenging but to increasingly marginalize human beings in the process. This 24 part walk through time culminates with the clumsy attempt of the United States to redress a wrong (9/11) with a preemptive invasion of Iraq in the hopes of making it a "kinder, gentler" society to mirror the United States. The long shadow of Christianity and its utopian dream of global progress is viewed through this same ideological lens with punishing finality. But alas, America's ignorance with messianic drive to democratize the world has instead manifested psychic entropy instead confirming the status of NOWHERE MAN IN NOWHERE LAND. The West is in decline as Oswald Spengler suggested one hundred years ago. What he may not have envisioned is that self-indulgent man is near his journey's end as "Robotic Nation" comes into prominence. The earth is a very different place than it was when man arrived. While humans are unlikely to become extinct, the world in which they have evolved is rapidly vanishing. JRF THE COMFORT OF RHETORIC Dante's decision seven hundred years ago to write his great poem not in Latin but in what he called the vulgar eloquence – Italian, the language of the people – and the innovation in the following century of printing from movable type are landmarks in the secularization of society, as well as an affront to the hegemony of priests and tyrants. The impact of today's emerging technologies promises to be no less revolutionary, perhaps even more so. The technology of printing enhanced the value of literacy, encouraged widespread learning, and became the sine qua non of modern civilization. New technologies will have an even greater effect, narrowing the notorious gap between the educated rich and the unlettered poor and distributing the benefits as well as the hazards of our civilization to everyone on earth. John Leonard (1939 – 2008), American cultural critic, "Cri de Coeur," The New York Review (February 8, 2001) "There are ample opportunities to help create a more humane and decent world if we choose to act upon them. A democratic communications policy would seek to develop means of expression and interaction that reflect the interests of and concerns of the general population, and to encourage their self-education and their individual and collective action." Bill Moyers (born 1934), American journalist and political commentator, A World of Ideas (Noam Chomsky interview), 1989. Â Â WHY NO WAY OUT? Â We have overwhelming data to solve our problems, but instead of solving our problems with this providential abundance we mask our difficulties and compound our problems with disinformation. Novelist D. H. Lawrence (1885 – 1930) was prescient long before the computer age: "Is it true that mankind demands, and will always demand miracle, mystery and authority?" He answers: "Surely it is true. Today man gets his sense of the miraculous from science and machinery, radio, airplanes, vast ships, zeppelins, poison gas, artificial silk: these things nourish man's sense of the miraculous as magic did the past." John Gray in Straw Dogs (2002) concurs:

DESCRIPTION:

Life is without cause and Nature has no conscience. Christian-Judaic tradition has defied this fact turning to the Old Testament to support the idea that God ordained humans to dominate and have dominion over the Earth (Genesis). The rational being that man is a conscious being and superior and apart from other animals as he is made in the image and likeness of God.

The Sacred Words of the Bible were composed thousands of years ago when the known Western world was less than a million souls, but now is fast-tracking to 8 billion while diminishing the Earth's animal, vegetable and mineral natural resources to the point of exhaustion.

The Christian tradition of progress has proven a lie as well with the utopian dream a fading fantasy. Faith in Utopia is dead. Like other faiths, it may be resurrected as there is evidence that 'Old Time Religions' are resurfacing. They are currently at the heart of global conflict reeking terror, mayhem and ubiquitous violence.

Secular religion as science plays surrogate to apocalyptic theology promising redemption if not salvation through the miracle of synthetics to the Earth's natural resources including man himself in the form of electronics and robotics. Soon, there will be no tangible function for man as robotics will have replaced him in work, and will have developed consciousness with the ability to think and act beyond human comprehension.

Science paradoxically compounds its challenges by accelerating the growth of human population through these synthetics while diminishing man's function through Frankenstein robotics. This is chasing man into Nowhere Land or the garbage dump of his excesses that only robots can tolerate.
