Entrance Day: Justin Gets Collared

Ken Glass

This story has adult content and is meant for mature audiences (18 years+)

This is a work of fiction. All characters, names, and places, are used fictitiously. Any resemblance to actual people, alive or dead, is purely coincidental.

Ch.1: Gap Year

I stared up at the old, 3-story brick building. Vines of ivy crawled up the side of the building and onto the roof, wrapping around the chipped brick chimney. A big sign was posted above the front door.

John Lewis Preparatory School

I just turned 19 and I didn't want to be spending my gap year taking more classes, but I knew it'd be worth it in 2 semesters. I'm an only child, and both my mom and dad went to an Ivy League school for college, so I'm expected to do the same.

I just graduated high school last month. My GPA was 4.0, but my SAT scores weren't good enough to get into an Ivy League school. I still applied to all of them, but got rejected by every single one.

My parents urged me to come to this prep school for a year to improve my SAT scores. I really want to go to a prestigious Ivy League school for college, so I agreed.

Now here I am, standing at the front door of the main building.

This morning, I took a 2 hour taxi ride from my parent's house to get here. The dirt road off the highway leading to the school was a couple miles long. Tall oak and pine trees lined the narrow road and blocked most of the sun, creating jagged shadows from the branches.

We followed the dirt path for about 10 minutes until we drove into a 5 acre clearing with an old brick building up front and half a dozen smaller buildings in back.

The driver dropped me off at the crumbling stone staircase leading up to the front door. I got my 2 bags of clothes out of the trunk and paid the driver. Then he sped away back down the long dirt road. Dust followed behind the yellow taxi until it rounded a corner, out of sight.

I studied the front of the building. Wide slate stone steps led up to a wooden front porch that wrapped around the sides of the house. A hanging swing near the front door swayed in the breeze. There were also a few rocking chairs on the porch.

The old brick house along with the ivy crawling up the chimney, and the big front porch made me feel like I had gone back 100 years.

Then it dawned on me that I hadn't seen a single person since I pulled up. 'Where is everyone?' I thought to myself as I studied the front yard and dusty driveway. There were a few cars parked on the edge of the gravel, but no-one was around. And I couldn't see anyone through the windows of the building.

19 year old Justin just graduated high school. He has his mind set on going to an Ivy League school for college, but got rejected from all of them because his SAT scores just weren't good enough.

He decides to spend this next year at an all-boys preparatory school to improve his test scores.

Justin gets there the first day and meets his orientation leader, Mr. Dailey.

Mr. Dailey and a couple other fit and mature men lead Justin through the check-in process.

The process might be hard, and Justin is going to be stretched, but they need to make sure that he's a good fit for the school.
