Chapter 1

This afternoon's "The Lead," with Jake Tapper, on CNN (Cable News Network), was especially interesting, with a lot of news stories.

One of the big stories is the revelation from the Trump Administration of a new tax plan.

Secretary of the Treasury, Steven Mnuchen, spoke on the subject.

Of course the new tax plan is just a proposal, and will be debated in the Senate and in the House.

They will no doubt not just rubber stamp the tax plan, but will come up with their own modifications.

Then, the House and Senate will try to come to a reconciliation that both groups of legislators can agree on.

And then the bill will go to the President for the signing into law.

One thing about the plan is the intent to reduce taxes on American businesses. Taxes that have been said to now be about the highest taxes on businesses in the world.

Many feel that reducing taxes on businesses will cause our economy to grow.

I hope it works that way.

By reducing taxes on businesses, they will have more money to invest in their businesses, to expand, to acquire new machines, to hire more employees.

I hope it works.

I think we've had it work that way in the past, when taxes were reduced.

But there's really no way to be sure ahead of time, except for divine revelation from God, such as has sometimes been given to the Lord's servants, the Prophets.

But, of course, an individual Christian could pray, and receive divine revelation.

In one of his books, Kenneth E. Hagin, told about an investor who never made a bad investment. He had a walk-in closet. He would go into his closet, and pray, and pray.

He might come out to eat, or catch a nap. Then go back to praying in his closet. He would get an answer from God, and apparently never made a bad investment.

Tapper talked a little with Congressman Chris Collins (R, of New York), who was in favor of "budget neutral" changes to the budget.

Budget neutral means that the changes made pay for themselves, so that we're not adding to the national debt.

But with so many tax cuts, I don't think we have budget neutrality. *

A tax cut for corporations from 35% to 20% is way too severe. It does take some money, you know, to run the government.
