The Fly on the Wall

Right on schedule you enter your room
Flop on the bed
Place your hand to head
An encouraging song you begin to sing
Only five seconds in and your phone begins to ring
I see that you're frustrated and have taken all that you can take
You muster up a smile yet your happiness is up for debate
You desperately attempt to hold it together
For public opinion sake
If only they knew what I do
Would they accept your truth?
You offer others a plate of freedom
Yet you're tormented by the demons of your youth

Terrified to free-fall
You must be in control
Manipulating others to prove their loyalty
As if they're tossing change at a toll
Secretly you question and ask God, "Why me?"
He responds, "You chose this, this is not who I destined you to be."

Nightly you fall to your knees
Face damped from tears
You're tired of the facade
You've been playing it for years
The ones that have been ordained to help
You push them away

It hurts you to see them leave

It hurts them more to stay

Your internal hurt you keep hidden

So no one will know

But it's louder than the trumpet

That Louis Armstrong used to blow

My perspective is never known

I'm as insignificant as they come

I don't get paid much attention

Yet I know the truth in which you're from

You've got pulled in to believing your own hype

You've always prided yourself for not being that type

I have no one to tell

If I did no one would believe me because of my position

Yet I have the greatest perspective when it comes to your heart condition

Your secrets are safe with me

Counter Clockwise

12 places in the world that I've always wanted to visit

Looking at my money

Thoughts telling me to dismiss it

11 vantage points when I'm making vital decisions

Reality gets lost

So I exist within my visions

10 hours a day gets devoted to my job

My paystub has a lot in common

With the definition of rob

9 feelings that I possess that I'm too afraid to show

Like searching for water in a desert

That place of isolation is no go

8 events that I've encountered that has shaped the course of my life

Even in my moments of clarity

It's a struggle to do what's right

7 days of the week I am inspired by the journey of others

Their strength becomes my motivation

Persistence is the key

To reach my final destination

6 years in a place that I was passionately devoted

I lost some things in the process

But I learned to be promoted

5 moments I wish I could live again

I would cherish them more dearly

Knowing that every season has an appointed end

4 people that can immediately put a smile on my face with just a mention of their names

Rose Mary, Lorene, Marion and finally James

I was blessed to know you

You live forever in my heart

Memories keep us close

Even though we're far apart

3 scriptures I recite to myself when my life doesn't seem to be going in the right direction

The Word redirects my focus

Understanding that it's for my protection

2 teachers saw in me what I didn't see in myself

They were captivated by my potential

Knowing that my legacy would equate to more than just wealth

1 heartbeat that ended too soon

1 life I often think about when I'm alone in my room

What would you have been like?

What would have been the color of your eyes?

Would I have wanted to know the sex?

Would I have wanted it to be a surprise?

Nothing in life can be repeated

Even if time were to travel

Counter clockwise

Consciously Speaking

Disrespect intellect

Exalt degradation

Brutalize purity

Applaud fornication

Who out there will stand on the truth?

The motherland is filled with gold

Yours is plated on your tooth

Ring the bell

Rise and see

Our diminished history

Text book filled with lies

Like slavery was a case of serendipity

Millionaires are made from the sweat of an Indonesian child *
