Renee Johnson walked into the large building again for the thousandth time. The New Orleans rehabilitation system was her home away from home. The lights were dim through the hallways showing off little more than silhouettes of objects in the building. Renee had seen many people come through her door that she pushed to get back on track in life. There had also been too many people to count who had spent one day in her chair or on the couch and never returned. Most of her patients however were court ordered and really didn't have a choice. She had found out the hard way a long time ago that business should never be mixed with pleasure. Her downfall had been her worst point in life and it was somewhere she never wanted to return.

At her age most women were married with kids. She decided to focus her time and dedication into a career. She couldn't see herself spending her life changing diapers. She wanted more out of life. Traveling was something that had always been important to her and she was happy to say it was something she was now able to enjoy.

Lights were flipped on as she passed by the switches and she felt herself sigh when the light flooded through. There was something about the dark that didn't sit well with her. Stepping through the door of her office she began thinking of her next trip. Deciding on a trip to Rome next she hesitated knowing the one place she wanted to visit was off the map. Her dream of Paris was something she didn't want to do alone. It was known throughout the world as the city of romance and love. She sighed as she pulled up to the large screen of her computer and pushed the button in to turn it on. Her first client was a new one and like most sent to her from Judge Mathews. She was a stickler for putting anyone who came through her court room into strict rehabilitation and the judge knew that within New Orleans, Renee was the best.

Sitting quietly and reading through the file she never heard the person come through her doorway until he cleared his throat. Looking up slightly her eyes widened with what she saw. It started with black combat boots and trailed up to a pair of well-muscled legs incased in light colored jeans. Her eyes skipped over the well-formed package between his legs before reaching a dark expanse of chest. She realized that it was a black T shirt she saw tucked into the pants and her eyes kept traveling upward until they stopped at a pair of dark blue eyes. The man was drop dead gorgeous. He made her want to purr just by standing there. He had dark curly hair that laid to his shoulders and a goatee that quirked with the grin he was giving her. He was wearing a black leather jacket and his hands were nonchalantly stuck into his pockets.

"May I help you?" Her voice sounded foreign to her own ears. It was deeper and huskier than it should be. Clearing her throat she tried to pass it off as her throat being disturbed. She could tell by the look he gave her that he wasn't buying it and his grin split into a full blown smile at the quirk of her eyebrow.

"Lewis Cobb, at your service."

"And how may I help you?"

"Well it looks like that file you have there has my name on it."

Renee looked down to see he was correct. "Yes."

"I'm your first victim of the day I think." She watched in outrage as he walked over to sit on the couch. Taking one of his well-muscled arms he pushed everything on the coffee table to the opposite side he was now sitting. Leaning back he nestled into the seat cushions on the back of the couch and propped his booted feet on the expanse of coffee table he had just cleared. Pulling out a baseball cap he must have had stuck in the back of his pants he pulled it down low on his eyes. "Wake me up in an hour so I can ditch this joint."

Sitting in stunned silence the rage began to build inside her. How dare this ogre come into her office and act like that? Well if he wouldn't be serious then he could join the rest of her drop outs on the corner. Walking over she steadied herself and then took the tip of her pointy shoe and shoved his booted feet with all her might but they didn't budge. Mumbling under her breath she leaned over unaware that she gave him an incredible view of breasts and pushed his feet with her hands. He instantly dropped his feet off the table. Unfortunately she had been pushing so hard she lost her balance and would have landed on the floor if he hadn't been quick and grabbed her around the waist. She felt herself sprawled out over him in a very unladylike fashion. His hand that rested at the small of her back burned through her shirt into her skin. Her eyes met his as she felt the stirring within her stomach build. There was that infuriating grin back in place on his face and she shoved him away to stand in front of him. Her hands had been placed on her slim hips and she tapped a shoe at him like an angry teacher lecturing her student.

"You did that on purpose."

"What did I do on purpose?"

“You deliberately waited until I was pushing you so I would fall on you.”

“Look lady I don’t know what your imagination is telling you but I have plenty of women throwing themselves at me. I don’t need to conspire for you to do it.”

“Well you can just leave if you aren’t going to take this seriously.”

“Now you know that isn’t an option. I am sure you read in that little file of yours that this is my second DWI and bitch Mathews is refusing to let me go without jail time unless I finish your six week course.” *

Renee Johnson is a workaholic. She loves to spend her time in her office finding out the depths of people's ailments. She has worked hard to establish the rehabilitation center that she calls her child. She is the one the judges send criminals to in order to straighten them out and she is on a winning streak until Lewis Cobb walks through her door. He is cocky, arrogant, crude and sexy as hell. Can she keep her mind on what he is doing there or will she throw caution to the wind when she is faced with him and his protective best friend.

Lewis has just been given an ultimatum. Spend 6 weeks with a stuffy doctor or jail. His decision is an easy one but what he thought would be a breeze turns into much more. His eyes bore holes into her skin as he anticipates what it would be like to have her under him screaming in pleasure. When the opportunity arises he will take what he wants but can he come back from it and will once be enough.

Justin Parker is Lewis' best friend and has been since grade school when Lewis' life hit rock bottom. The only one that Lewis has ever trusted he knows all of his secrets. When he finds the woman who is responsible for his friend's future he wants to wring her neck but instead finds himself in the middle of a full-blown triangle of passion. The head of the local motorcycle gang he can't show any weakness but can he walk away either?
