Chrystal Dawson, the beautiful young blonde from Sunset Heights was the only rich spoiled teenager selected by her Church, St. Peter, to attend a three month excursion deep into Mexico to help the underprivileged. At first, the idea seemed like an opportunity of a lifetime, she would get to experience the beauty of the pure and mystical Mexico, a far cry from her posh city life. But when explained that none of the luxuries that she enjoyed today would be accessible where she was going, she threw a fit. Her mother pleaded with her to take the offer, but she kept nagging about how miserable her life would be.

“Mom... they have no internet down there. No freaking internet! And my friends will be up here having an awesome time, I'll be stuck in the mud. In Mexico.”

“Honey, just think about the beautiful places you will be able to visit, the friends that you will make, and let's not talk about the good you'll be doing.” her mom pleaded.

“The good I'll be doing. Usually that means working your ass off and not even getting a 'thank you'."

"Look, don't forget that you will stay in a good hotel, and besides we are going to give you money for anything you need. All you have to do is go and enjoy yourself. Just help out the nuns, okay?"

Convinced that the trip wouldn't be a hassle, she headed towards her room, slid her finger across her cell phone screen and dialed her best friend, Lucy. She told her about what her mother had said; that she would be staying in a five star luxury hotel with service personnel and that she would only help supervise whatever projects the nuns had lined up. Lucy awed hearing of the wonderful trip. She even imagined being there herself, spoiled silly like her best friend, being tended to by hot men. But that wasn't the case. What Crystal didn't know was that her mom had actually planned the whole trip when she talked to the nuns about their yearly excursion to the impoverished remote villages of Mexico, deep in the heartland of Chiapas.

Chrystal's mother had conspired with her husband to send off their spoiled little brat to learn a harsh lesson of life. They were tired of their daughter taking life for granted. Not only that but she took everything for granted, even the small little details. She needed to be taught about how difficult it was to earn her keep. Life wasn't as simple as just being born and demanding the best of life? It was about hard work, dedication and most importantly, it was about knowing that life wasn't as easy as it seemed. Not everybody was given the gift of luxury from their parents. Nor where they even given the same opportunities to succeed in the world. It just seemed like the perfect way to teach her the importance of being responsible and becoming a more humble human being.

Chrystal kept bragging to her friend of what everything would end up being like. She even went online on her Facebook account and posted her status as, "Yay, going on vacation to Mexico!" right after she hung up the phone. Her silly little fragile mind went on a spiral roller coaster of emotions and fantasies. She could almost taste being there, the sweet Margaritas, the cool breeze of the ocean and the sound of the seagulls became all part of her momentary fantasy.

Oh my god, it will be the best time of my life! she thought. *
