This book is a work of fiction. Names, characters, places and events contained within are products of the author's imagination. Any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead, is entirely coincidental.

WARNING: This 5,700-word e-book contains sexually explicit scenes and adult language. Coerced seduction is a central plot theme. This story may be offensive and/or triggering to some readers as a result.

"Wake up, Miss Miracle."

At the sound of his voice, I come to in a dark, cold room. I'm kneeling on a hard concrete floor. My wrists are bound behind my back with rough twine and I'm shivering. This, I realize, is because I'm totally naked, which is, y'know, a bad sign.

The last thing I remember: A bank security alarm is going off. I tell a handsome man in a sharp business suit to drop his weapon. He tells me to knock myself out on the coin counting machine. A sharp throbbing in my forehead tells me which one of us obeyed our orders.

What exactly compelled me to knock myself out on the coin counting machine? That still eludes me. Normally, I have a dedicated interest in staying conscious during bank robberies.

But I remember wanting to do it. That's the weird part.

That's the part that scares me.

There's a single, naked lightbulb dangling over my head. The dim yellow glow that it emits doesn't reach the room's dark corners. There could be anything hiding in those shadows. Imagine my surprise when "anything" turns out to be a sultry male voice.

"You really do look lovely bound like that," it says.

Then, out of the darkness, a man emerges. He's wearing Armani. He smells like fresh cut grass and amber. And even in the low lighting, I can tell that he's the single most handsome man I have ever seen in my life. Dark, thick hair. Touch of silver at the temples. A smile that could charm the habit off of a nun-- which, as far as the public is concerned, is pretty much what I am. I'm Miss Miracle, the superpowered sweetheart of Passion City, able to leap tall buildings in a yadda yadda yadda and upholder of righteous Christian morals.

In reality, I'm just a nerdy virgin with super strength, laser eyes and a strong sense of do-gooderness, but the second you let your boyfriend put a promise ring on your finger, you become a self-righteous Mother Theresa in tights and a cape. Honestly, the press will spin anything to make a story these days.

Even I have to admit it, though. The sheer sexuality the man before me exudes makes that promise ring weigh a little more heavily on my finger.

"Would you mind untying me?" I ask the man. I'm putting on my best sweet and innocent voice-- that's what they're always after, anyway.

Don't get me wrong, I am 100% aware that this is probably the man who is responsible for my present state of undress. I know that he probably fondled my breasts and had a look between my legs before he tied me up. But I'm holding out the hope that maybe a pair of big, sad eyes and a little lip quiver will be enough to turn him to the light.

He'll work the knots out of my binding, wrap his suit jacket around my shoulders while he works out what exactly he did with my sports bra and tights. He'll make me a cup of tea, maybe breakfast while I wait for the police to show up, apologize for how truly sorry he is about the whole armed robbery and kidnapping thing. I won't press charges. I'll visit him in jail. He'll find Jesus there, or maybe just use the time to think. In his reformation, he'll lose that hooded, hollow glint in his eyes. Once he's out, I'll dump my ultra-chaste boyfriend. We'll date, get married, have hot sex, maybe some kids. They'll have his dark waves and my ability to punch holes through brick walls.

That's what I imagine happening, anyway. What actually happens is he says, "Lick my boot," and I scramble forward on my knees, lower my mouth to what has to be Italian leather, extend my tongue, and holy fishsticks, am I actually licking this man's boot?

The leather is clean. It's the act itself that leaves a bad taste in my mouth. I've never submitted to any man, woman-- anyone. Not like this. I've never even been kissed. But no matter how hard I try to stop, I'm still giving long, loving licks to this man's left shoe. No matter how hard I try to turn my tongue away, I can't help but like it. *

She was brave, powerful, innocent with stars in her eyes... And he would stop at nothing until he had her. Broken. Used. Completely and unquestionably under his control.

Even if it meant extinguishing the stars themselves.

Superhero Courtney is Passion City's sweetheart in a cape and tights. Bubbly and blonde, she has a promise ring on her finger and nothing but good in her heart.

Billionaire Sebastian Easton is anything but good-hearted. Cast out of his family fortune and on the run from the law, Sebastian uses his powers for evil and evil alone.

Courtney knew she was out of her league when she went up against him-- but she didn't realize exactly how powerful he was. Now, as his captive, Courtney is faced with her most dangerous foe yet. Sebastian has the power to make her do anything-- anything-- at only the slightest suggestion.

His intentions are clear: He will break her. He will ruin her. He will turn her into wanton slut, a slave, a whore--

And she can't let him.

But she can't stop him, either.

This 5,700-word erotic short involves bondage and rough sex as Sebastian controls and manipulates Courtney to fulfill his every desire. If you're into dark erotic situations, innocent protagonists and very, very bad men, this book is definitely for you.
