Chapter 1

Whack. Zip. Zang. Pang. Sip. Slam!

Training at the International Super Spy Agency is really, really hard. It's so tough that only one new recruit is selected to train every year, and this year, the Agency has chosen me. Me! I know, it's soooo cool. My Dad is the world's best Super Spy, and I guess I was always destined to follow in his footsteps. My name is Charlie Chucky, I'm in the sixth grade, I love sports, computer games, and watching videos on the internet.

At the Agency, I'm training against fighting robots, or bots, as my Dad calls them.

Pang. Sip. Slam!

But I'm not doing that. Right now, I'm eating lunch.

"Do you have to be so noisy when you eat, Charlie?" Mia asked.

My two best friends, Mia and Harley, are spending the day with me as I prepare for my Super Spy martial arts training.

Mia is so super cool—she can surf, dance, bike ride, rollerblade, knit, skateboard, complete crosswords, and stand on her head for forty-five minutes straight.

I could never be that cool.

Harley is the opposite to Mia—he can't surf, can't dance, can't ride a bike, can't rollerblade, can't knit, can't skateboard, can't do crosswords, and can't stand on his head at all. But Harley does have a black belt in Karaoke—the way that he sings could take down even the toughest of bad guys.

To be a Super Spy, you've got to train extra hard. Like, harder than you do at school. Or at home. Or anywhere, really.

This is me training hard.

I'm training extra-hard to be like my Super Spy Dad, and that means lots and lots of exercise. And lots and lots of exercise also means lots and lots of food, and lots and lots of food means lots and lots of lunches—which are my favorite part of training.

I've already had six lunches today.

This is Mia and Harley, training hard as well.

My friends love to join me at Super Spy training. They think it's super cool. They love to play with all my Super Spy gadgets while I train really hard at martial arts.

Part of the learning to be a Super Spy is learning how to fight and defend yourself. At the moment, I'm learning Karate, Jujitsu, Taekwondo, Judo, and Sushi.

The International Super Spy Agency training facility is huge, bigger than the biggest shopping mall, but with a lot less shops.

Uh-oh!

Here comes more of the training robots, ready to take me down.

Whack. Zip. Zang. Pang. Sip. Slam!

There. I've almost finished lunch. Now, time to deal with these pesky robots.

"Alright!" I moved into my fighting stance. "I'm ready to begin fight training! Give me the best that you've got, robot brains!"

Oh, they looked angry...

Actually, I'm not completely sure that they're angry. They could be irritated, or sad, or happy. Training robots have no expressions.

Whack!

Slam!

Bang!

I finish another sandwich that was in my back pocket, and now I'm ready to fight the training robots!

Chop!

Crack!

Ping!

I take out all the ninja robots with my totally awesome, dangerous super ninja moves!

I do a triple kick and side winder twisty-wisty, a choppy-whop, and a dingy dangle. Then I do a wickey-whack, a totally-crack, mega-smack pinky punch.

The robots go flying.

They're the totally secret moves that I've been working on at home, mostly in front of the mirror. Mom has had to buy six mirrors so far this month.

"You've done a lot of very impressive training today, Charlie." My Super Spy Dad clapped as he entered the room. He's a big guy. He's so big that for breakfast he eats four eggs, two pieces of toast, one muffin, three moldy bananas, fourteen individual pieces of rice, and six rotten apples. I want to grow up to be just like him. "You're getting better all the time. I think you're ready."

"Ready for what?"

"Ready for your first real Super Spy mission."

"What?!" I jumped up in surprise. "Really?! My first official Super Spy mission! Yes!"

Dad pulled me into a hug and almost crushed me with his massive arms. *

My name is Charlie Chucky and I'm training to be an international super spy.

Saturday started out like any other day until I was asked to go on my first Super Spy mission!

My assignment was to retrieve a valuable item from a small village in Japan, and it should've been an easy task;

Until the Shadow Ninjas tried to steal it!

So the evil ninjas are about to steal the world's most powerful weapon; but not if I can help it!

This story is a funny adventure that is engaging for children, middle school students, and grown-ups.
