From the author's desk Hello, my name is Sahil Munjal. I am an author based in Panipat. This is my first book. After juggling with my thoughts for a long time, I finally decided to publish it and share with the world. I wrote this book way back in 2015 on a personal diary and it was lying there since then. Recently, I thought of giving it a look and edited it to make it correct and better in every possible way. This book is a part of series which will focus on my life in Bangalore, one of the best phases of my life. I first visited Bangalore in 2014 and returned from there in 2015. The book contains that chapter and more chapters will arrive in future. I have tried to use simple language and amazing phrases to make the book easy to understand and at the same time have some learning value too. I am highly grateful to my parents Mr. Anil Munjal & Mrs. Geeta Munjal for their continuous support in making me stand where I am, my brother Utkarsh and my sister Soumya for helping me in every situation. Huge thanks to my teacher Mr. Rajesh Kumar, who taught me to work on reports. From there I improved my typing skills and developed a reading habit. Thanks to Uncle ji, Mr. Rajiv Bakshi, who is an author himself and continuously pushed me to publish my first book. Thanks to my mentors Dr. Rashmi Kapila and Mrs. Shubhli Bhalla, for their continuous dose of motivation in my life. Lots of love to the lifelines of my live- Shayna and Shivika who are a major part of this Book series. This book represents solely my opinions and not of any other person or organization related to me. Names of some people and places have been changed citing privacy reasons. I wish my readers all the best and I hope they have a wonderful experience. ☺☺☺

1.) Rajdhani Express in Rajdhani

25-12-2014 Rushing towards the Hazrat Nizammudin railway station, in the Unfamiliar 'Metropolis' New Delhi, I protected myself from almost being pick-pocketed. Huff! When this situation in New Delhi would change? Sick and tired of it! As soon as I entered inside, my excitement went to peaks higher than those of Nandi Hills of Bangalore. My heart was palpitating as I was waiting for Rajdhani Express! Luckily, it was on time. I boarded the train at 8:25 and my dad and uncle started issuing guidelines. It was natural on their part, since it was the first time I was going to travel alone. That too...too far, Bangalore! They seemed to be a bit relaxed when an old uncle who was travelling to Jhansi...told us that Bangalore is an amazing place and belongs to educated citizens ☺ Oh, I forgot to tell! Yes, I was travelling to the Garden City of India. With the whistle at 8:45, the train began moving, and responding to it's speed my heart started beating faster and faster. The cabins in my left & front were occupied by South Indians, it was the first time that I encountered them! Two different mentalities & cultures met each other without a debate, strange right? The cabin at the right was occupied by a human being belonging to high society of Delhi (completely bald), who was in his retirement age (not sure about that though). And...yes, I was sitting at the side two seater berth! Not too late, the Indian Railways welcomed me with tomato soup & breadsticks, which my dumbass considered as a diet food, like most of we North Indians do! Well, I forgot to make a point that this is not some "Travel Journal" of my tour stating the places I visited. The focus will be on what caused me to introspect, retrospect, and decide what to do keeping in mind all the aspects! So, let's move our focus from the breadsticks to what happened next. I tried focusing on getting sleep, as my mind was continuously thinking about my wishes which were going to be fulfilled this Christmas. I kept my bag below my head as a pillow, with the second purpose of keeping it safe and focused on sleeping. Thoughts of excitement and imaginations occurring due to the Adrenaline Rush were keeping sleep away from me.

2.) North India Vs South India

26-12-2014 Amidst the thousands of thoughts, I didn't realise when I caught sleep and woke up to a fresh morning, unable to figure out where I was. A strange thought entered in my mind that if I go out from the train in these forests, what am I going to do? While finding the answers to this question full of humor, innocence and creativity, I saw someone sleeping on the berth downside to me. He must have come while I was asleep. I went below and started talking to him, he told me that we were somewhere in MP and were about to reach Bhopal very soon! I was wondering how I'll spend this loooooong day, we were still in a "Hindi Land" despite a night of travelling. Then I realized that God had listened to me, when I saw that some girls from Jhansi had accompanied that Delhite uncle during night, and their 'High Society' talks about dentists and doctors had started. Since I had prayed only for "Some" source of little entertainment, therefore the girls' faces weren't visible at all, I could only hear their voices. It was the first time that listening the word "Doctor" made me laugh instead of giving anxiety. After all...he was from a North-Indian high society. A society where parents lie to their relatives about the scores of their children to increase their reputation. And...when those children grow-up, all those marks become just papers lying in the lockers, with no or little career choices available to them. A society where people claim to be educated but at the same time don't want female child. A society where people take pride in spending more money on their Kids' wedding than their education. The girls weren't sounding any less than 'Jhansi Ki Rani', their talks continued to make me laugh and time was passing easily due to that. The Bald-Man was criticizing each and everything like he was from "I hate this planet" campaign run by citizens of mars, I remember the most intellectual words that came out of his mouth "3 Idiots me Aamir ka kya tha? Story usne di?" All my life, I had believed that there is a separate story department for this task which gets credit in the end of the movie, in black and white. But this man had made me learn something which no one else could have. Meanwhile, that stranger next to me and I developed a good rapport (That was the only option for a 36-hour long journey). He said that he owns a firm named SR Powertech in Haridwar. Hardworking guy he was, very practical and knowledgeable too. He kept me engaged as he shared his experiences the whole day and was a good company! His name was Ramavtar Yadav.

A guy from a Small town moves to the Garden City of India to explore more about her. Travel along as I uncover the deep hidden stories and secrets lying inside the Silicon Valley of India. Struggle, Betrayal, Survival and Love. Worth it or not? Read the book to find out more. ;)
