Courtroom Defense in Serious Criminal Cases

Our law firm's immediate intervention, including a complete case investigation, helped reach numerous successful outcomes. The clients faced the risk of long sentences as well as losing child custody and/or professional licensing. And most criminal charges were dropped or set for dismissal.

Dismissal of Possession of Child Pornography Felonies: While on probation for similar charges, an artist was again accused of possessing child pornography. We contested the allegations at the preliminary hearing by questioning the strength of the prosecutor's case, arguing that the government failed prove the prurient images were not AI-generated. Our arguments led to a victory for our client, who was released on bail.

No Jail Time in Federal Threats Case: A high-ranking official faced a federal indictment and prison time. Our office engaged in lengthy settlement discussions with federal officials from the U.S. Attorney's Office, presenting evidence of mitigation to avoid more aggravated federal charges and likely prison commitment. The government ultimately agreed as to our client's need for mental health assistance rather than incarceration, and to a non-custodial sentence. The federal judge placed our client on probation.

In-Patient Program in Lieu of Incarceration on Drug Case: A client who was a former radiologist had been out of touch with his family for ten years due to his drug addiction. He faced two felony drug sales warrants - one in LA, one in OC - and state prison time. Our office succeeded in reducing both felony cases to misdemeanors and having him enter an in-patient drug treatment program. After successful completion of the program, he will be eligible to expunge both criminal cases and reapply for radiology practice licensing.

Dismissal of Hate Crime Allegations: As part of a road rage incident, a client was charged with vandalism and faced time in custody due to a hate crime allegation. At the preliminary hearing, following cross examination of the accuser, our office convinced the magistrate to dismiss the hate crime due to reasonable doubt. Our client is now eligible for Mental Health Diversion, timely therapy and psychiatric intervention, and ultimate dismissal/sealing of the vandalism felony arrest.

Rejection for Prosecution - Two Criminal Cases: As part of a hotly contested divorce, our client faced two separate criminal investigations initiated by his former spouse. Our law firm demonstrated the inconsistency of the accusations, raising reasonable doubt by presenting physical evidence and third-party witness statements. The assigned detectives agreed the accusations were unsubstantiated and closed the cases without pursuing formal charges in court.

Mental Health Diversion for Victim of Abuse: A young woman with PTSD hired our firm after she was arrested for felony grand theft charges. The DA objected to her release on bail; arguing bail would be secured by the use of stolen funds. Our firm pursued mental health diversion, arguing her act of fraud was the result of a mental crisis due to her own victimization. Diversion was granted over the prosecutor's objection, allowing our client to avoid a criminal conviction, stay out of jail, obtain appropriate mental health treatment, and work on repaying the victim through the restitution process.

Judicial Diversion in Civil Rights Violation Case: A college student was charged with vandalism after being accused of defacing a pride image on campus. Our firm filed a petition for a judicial diversion dismissal, highlighting our client's academic and other accomplishments, the impact that the conviction would have on his future, and his legal suitability for diversion. The court granted the diversion. Our client completed extensive community service and classwork, earning a dismissal of all charges. The case and police reports will be ordered sealed.

Rejection of Molestation Charges: Law enforcement investigated our client for molestation offenses after DCFS began an investigation following school reports. Our law firm presented a defense position raising reasonable doubt by presenting witness statements and other evidence. The case was reviewed by the DA's office and rejected for formal prosecution.
