Getting to know our Marriage Seminar speakers: John and Carla Moore

John and Carla married in 1986, and have since been involved in ministry at the Bible Chair on the campus of TSU, then with the Southwest School of Bible Studies in Austin, Texas. Later they worked with the Dripping Springs, Texas, church of Christ. In January of 2017, John and Carla began a new ministry called Bible Passages: a work dedicated to reaching souls, training preachers, and defending the faith. They work closely with the Bear Valley Bible Institute International in Denver, and World Video Bible School in Maxwell, Texas. John is the director of the Bible Land Passages Project as well as serving as one of the scriptwriters and narrators of the Bible Land Passages videos. He and his wife Carla, are also the directors of Bible Land Passage Tours, Expeditions, and Studies; an educational ministry dedicated to defending the faith and edifying the church. Since 1986, John has preached in Gospel Meetings and lectureships in eighteen states and has conducted or participated in numerous campaigns to various foreign countries including Jamaica, Tobago, Malaysia, and Singapore. John and Carla have three sons, Jordan (daughter-in-law, Erin), Jacob (daughter-in-law, Alyssa), and Micah (daughter-in-law Courtney). They adore their eight precious grandchildren.

John will teach a combined adult class, then preach during the morning worship hour today.

Neal at the Cross
Marriages Secretly In Trouble Neal Pollard Social media has done us no favors, with the temptation it presents to project happiness and perfection while masking the trials and challenges inevitable for such a long-term commitment as marriage is. Not only can we be guilty of misrepresenting our own relationship, but we can unwittingly put pressure on other couples who see these projections and increase dissatisfaction with their less than perfect and happy marriage. Of course, the answer to this is not to use forums like social media to air the sordid stains on our life's laundry. But, there is a need for some reasoning and common sense that can assist us in building better marriages. The University of Wyoming's Family And Consumer Sciences department has an excellent study by Ben Silliman entitled, "Intimacy Means Conflict." They begin with a profound, if provocative, statement, saying, "To love may not mean to fight, but it does mean to become close, to care a lot, and eventually to discover differences and disagreements. Those who love much have a better chance of conflict." This great study includes some common sense suggestions for working through the conflict: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Focus on needs, not solutions.• Brainstorm possible solutions.• Choose the best option.• Make a plan.• Implement the plan.• Seek feedback and evaluate both the process and the outcome. He does not overtly come from a biblical worldview. He is not exclusively focused on monogamous marriage relationships. But his counsel is sound and consistent with biblical principles. Cross-check each of his suggestions with Scriptural guidance: Philippians 2:3-4, Ecclesiastes 4:9, 1 Corinthians 10:23, Proverbs 16:3, Psalm 37:5, 1 Peter 3:7; & James 3:17. The passages show that the Bible talks about all these methods and approaches, but it does not suggest that this is all the Bible has to say about these. I am convinced the devil would love nothing more than for married couples, burdened by conflict and even repeatedly addressing the same issue or issues, to just give up on their marriages. Wouldn't he love for us to be convinced that we're the only ones struggling and our situations are hopeless? I know such thoughts are not of God, who urges us to see possibilities even through improbabilities because of His capabilities (Phil. 4:13). It's fatal to a marriage to ignore or be in denial about the things that produce conflict. And it's foolish to believe that a marriage is doomed because conflict is present. There is no way to achieve closer relationships without negotiating the unavoidable differences between two individuals striving to be a united couple. May I encourage all of us who are married to redouble our commitment to working through conflict in order to reach closer, Christ-centered relationships. Watch Light of the World on WNKY-NBC TV or WVBS Online. Sundays at 6:30 AM & 10 AM with Hiram & Neal.
