

©2008 by Mark Hamilton

The Secret Society Brings You
The Forbidden System

Make All
the
People Rich
Including
The Poor!

Mark Hamilton

Idealized in the 20th Century
Actualized in the 21st Century

To: My Level-Nine Apprentices

From: Mark Hamilton

Note: As you read through the Orientation below, realize that it is addressing new members who will have gone through the same selection process that you went through. I described that selection process to you in our Level-Three Essence Meeting. Read the following orientation from the perspective of having received this booklet from us, but not yet having been invited into our secret meetings.

The Forbidden System

Orientation

It was not easy to find you. We spent time, money, and held meetings to locate you. At some point, we will tell you what we were looking for and why we chose you. But for now, this booklet is meant only for you. There is something confidential I must tell you.

Those above you do not want you to have this forbidden information. In fact, this information has remained unwritten for a very long time. A world-renowned scientist tried to get this information to the public in 1990 and was instead sent to prison. Today, an exclusive association, a secret society, is releasing this forbidden knowledge to a select few people. You are one of those hand-picked persons. You see, your profile matched the character traits we are looking for to receive this secret information never before seen by the public. You truly are special. In fact, your character traits match those who are members of our exclusive association of some of the world's most important people. When you are part of our inner circle, we will reveal those character traits we saw in you. After you read through The Forbidden System (reserved for only you), you will then be ready for an invitation to our inner circle. Indeed, we are truly impressed with your character traits, and we want you eventually here with us.

But for now, that must remain a mystery as we focus on why we sent this forbidden knowledge to you: For 3000 years the information enclosed has been forbidden to the public — forbidden from the peasants of the past to ordinary Americans today. Our secret society, for the first time, has printed the Forbidden System that will bring ordinary people extraordinary wealth and love beyond what even the most selfish leaders hoard for themselves. As your profile indicates, the possibilities for you are endless. Realize, you are among the very first ordinary persons in 3000 years to lay eyes upon the Forbidden System, and you stand to benefit enormously. You are among the rare, early chosen ones to gain this forbidden knowledge. You display the character traits the men and women in our exclusive association seek out. We had to spend a lot of money looking for you. You do not know it yet, but we believe you will someday be part of this association of the successful few...a parallel society of the fortunate few. But that will happen after you read through your reserved copy of the Forbidden System – reserved for your eyes only.

Back to your Forbidden System: Since the beginning of civilization, there has always been a lucrative bank of knowledge that the leaders forbade the scholars to let out. If that forbidden knowledge ever did get out, then the highly-guarded hidden secrets to wealth would get to mere ordinary people. The leaders of society would lose their rank. So, this highly-guarded bank of knowledge always remained in the hands of the fortunate few, a safe-box for the leaders only. They protected it with swift severity. In 1990, a world-renowned scientist tried to get it out but was sent to prison by the authorities. This Secret Society also consists of renegade writers who are protected by the First Amendment, willing to get the forbidden knowledge out to those with special character traits like you.

You are being exposed to an exclusive association, a secret society consisting of powerful and wealthy renegades who dare to release the millennia-old forbidden knowledge. The 3000-year-old forbidden knowledge contains the millennia-old hidden secrets to wealth, love, power, creativity, happiness, health and longevity. Only your wealthy and powerful leaders knew and exploited these secrets throughout history.

I must admit, we studied your profile. We spent labor and direct costs looking for you. The Secret Society has since determined that you have the character to be among the chosen few to see the Forbidden System of “unwritten” knowledge. The “unwritten” 110-page booklet in your hands reveals the forbidden turnkey system that will, for the first time, now allow ordinary people — allow you — to experience wealth. You have never seen this turnkey system before, and you will never see it...except through this 110-page “unwritten” booklet reserved in your name, only for you.

Never before has there been such an opportunity for ordinary people: For the first time in our human history, they can be rich, including the poor!

As you are one of the chosen few among the masses to be selected to receive this forbidden knowledge, you hold a civic duty to spread the news to others around you – those you care about – not so fortunate as to have received this priceless booklet. Indeed, the Forbidden System emerges from the shadows after 3000 years, and you are one of the selected few chosen to receive this 110-page booklet containing the complete Forbidden System. Here are four consequences of the Forbidden System as it unfolds before your eyes:

- The Forbidden System — forbidden by all authorities — will allow ordinary people to live like millionaires without lifting a finger.
- The Forbidden System — forbidden since 1000 BC — will cure disease after disease and eventually cure aging itself.

- The Forbidden System — forbidden from ordinary people — will lift us from boring stagnation-fallen lives to exhilarating creation-driven lives.
- The Forbidden System — forbidden from love and marriages — will ignite or reignite romantic love.

The entire Forbidden System is revealed in this 110-page booklet entitled Make All the People Rich, Including the Poor! You get the complete system in one thorough reading! Remember, we sought you out and ultimately want you in the Secret Society. So read this priceless information cover to cover. The authorities never allowed this highly-guarded information into the hands of the public.

Read the Forbidden System while you can. Your life will go through an amazing metamorphosis. The Forbidden System will show you how ordinary people can live like millionaires — even the poor! It will show you how ordinary people can live much healthier and much longer — even the elderly! It will show ordinary people how to break free from their depressing stagnation traps to soar with creativity into the exhilarating lives they were meant to live — even the hopelessly suppressed laborers and the dejected unemployed! The Forbidden System will bring romantic love to singles and bring back romantic love to couples. It is all in this complete Forbidden System — forbidden by the authorities for 3000 years. The Secret Society discloses the Forbidden System to a hand-picked few within the potentially very small window of time we have — you being one of those select chosen few.

Your Secret Society invitation will come after you have read the Forbidden System. That's right, we will give you two weeks to read this forbidden knowledge. Then, you will be ready to join us. We will send you an invitation to our exclusive association of powerful and successful men and women. You then decide. I will just say, for the record, we found you, and we like what we see. We want you with us eventually. You deserve the wonderful life of wealth, romantic love, and prestige...the life you were meant to live and can have in our exclusive association of the fortunate few. To qualify for our invitation in two weeks, you must read the following forbidden information from cover to cover.

The Forbidden System

The Forbidden System

Introduction

The premise of the Forbidden System is simple: man is imperfect. Man is flawed. Man is vulnerable to incorrect opinions, selfish agendas, destructive temptations, misguided behaviors, dishonest corruption, even manipulative evil.

By removing all imperfections — by removing man from making the political and legal decisions — a perfect power-reactor explosion of prosperity, love, wealth, and health will overwhelm society...sooner than later.

The problem in all political and legal systems ever known to man is: they are ultimately controlled by flaw-filled man. The American political system, for instance, whether liberal left or conservative right, in both cases is controlled by man — by flaw-filled man.

Civilization will take an unprecedented leap forward by removing imperfection, by removing man and his endless opinions and agendas from creating, interpreting, and executing law.

The method to remove man is the Prime Law. The rapid consequence, as shown throughout this booklet, is millionaire-like prosperity for all the people, including the poor.

Forbidden Chapter One
Removing Rule of Man for Universal Wealth
Including the Poor!

“Mark Hamilton’s writings go down to the fundamental nature of things. There is no going deeper, which makes his writings unique and ideal for cutting through the endless opinions and agendas and illusions. I have studied Hamilton’s writings for three decades and am convinced of this. With the Prime Law, Mr. Hamilton gets down to the fundamental nature of law and politics in order to remove man and his endless opinions and agendas and illusions. From what I can tell, disclosing this Forbidden System will lead to the success of Hamilton’s Twelve Visions, and ordinary people like me will become very wealthy, which has been forbidden since the beginning of civilization.”

— From a Respected Secret Society Member

Once we recognize and remove from politics and law the inherent problem of man — flaw-filled creatures easily influenced by power and money — then we will quickly rise into a wealthy world...even the poor will rise, as we will see in this booklet.

Ruling-class power must be taken out of the hands of man. Freedom and prosperity throughout history suffered when man created, interpreted, and executed the law. On the other hand, freedom and prosperity throughout history soared when man was removed from the political and bureaucratic controls. Our own country soared when we largely removed the rule of man (i.e., removed a monarch with our U.S. Constitution).

To complete the evolution into universal prosperity, the powers of the legislative, judicial, and executive branches must be taken away from the opinions and agendas of flaw-filled man and put into a flawless Prime Law.

If you take a hundred well-educated men and women and ask them their thoughts on important issues of law and politics, they will bombard you with many different opinions and agendas — as exemplified by the U.S. Senate. Moreover, once in positions of political power, surrounded by the trappings of irresistible power and wealth, their answers become directed to their own benefits, for their own political clout.

Man is an easily influenced, easily corrupted creature. Therefore, the laws that govern man (i.e., protect man) must be free of man.

The only way to be free of man is to reduce law to its essence. Once at the fundamental nature of something there is no going deeper. All the opinions, agendas, illusions, dishonesties and corruption — all man's faults — no longer matter. The fundamental nature stands unchanged, unscathed, unconditional, uncorrupted...plain for all to forever see and know, which is the nature of the Prime Law.¹

Indeed, the fundamental, biological nature of protection is captured in the Prime Law, which supersedes all law. The Prime Law removes man — including all the smart law-school graduates — from the decision-making process of law. Law leaps to another level altogether, for the first time completely free of man.

The Prime Law determines the creation or lack of creation of new laws, not man with his endless opinions and agendas and faults. The fundamental of protection — the Prime Law — determines the interpretation of laws, not man with his endless egos, selfish ambitions, and many human flaws. The Prime Law determines the execution and enforcement of laws, not man who is drawn to intoxicating power, rampant dishonesties, and a capacity for evil.

When the Prime Law removes man from creating, interpreting, and executing law, something amazing happens: the heavy and corrupt ruling-class of man comes off society. In that new freedom, as you will learn throughout this booklet, society and technology soar. A Great Technological Revolution takes off and causes our buying power to multiply a hundredfold, maybe a thousandfold, making everyone rich, including the poor! We already saw the forerunner with the uninhibited computer revolution in which buying power multiplied a thousandfold in a few years (see Twelve Visions by Mark Hamilton).

Let us now introduce a new grassroots political party with the sole objective to remove man from creating, interpreting, and executing law in order to make all people wealthy, including the poor.

The name of that new political party that removes man from governing — removes the corrupt ruling class — is the Twelve Visions Party (TVP). Let us now see how the TVP will do that.

¹Mark Hamilton's Twelve Visions demonstrate why protection of citizens is the only legitimate purpose of government and is the essence of law, the Prime Law.

Forbidden Chapter Two

Presenting the Prime Law for Universal Wealth, Health, Safety & Peace

The Visionaries envision a profoundly free, wealthy, healthy, and safe society protected by rule of flawless law. Man — even the most educated man or woman — is by nature a flaw-filled creature. Any idea or thought put before man generates endless opinions, arguments, and agendas. Moreover, man is vulnerable to ego, temptations, and irresistible power. Man by nature tends to satisfy his own appetite first. In other words, he puts his own gain before society. At the expense of society, politicians build political clout and re-election power.

Historically, the more successful a political system is at removing man from making, interpreting, and executing law, the freer the nation and the wealthier and healthier the people.

Looking back: throughout the first millennium, the majority of people suffered, even starved under the rule of man.

The Magna Carta in 1215 AD began a trend of restricting the rule of man. Prosperity eventually began climbing; the people began living in better conditions.

The U.S. Constitution in 1787 continued the trend by dramatically restricting the rule of man. Consequently, Americans enjoyed unrivaled prosperity. The majority eventually joined the middle class.

The Prime Law coming with the success of the Twelve Visions Party, will complete the trend by fully removing the rule of man. All people will become wealthy, including the poor.

It was America that dramatically advanced the evolution from the rule of man (a monarch) to the rule of law (the U.S. Constitution). And it is America that can complete that evolution from the rule of flaw-filled man to the rule of flawless law by fully removing man from making, interpreting, and executing law. That final evolution is the Prime Law, which will lift society into unprecedented freedom and its people into never-before-seen wealth, health, and peace.

The Prime Law

In recognition of man's inherent shortcomings, the Visionaries aspire to lift the rule of law to a whole new level not yet seen on Earth. The Prime Law completes the millennia-long evolution of removing flaw-filled man from creating, interpreting, and executing law and will lead us to the wealthiest, healthiest, and safest nation to ever exist on Earth.

For the first time, law will be completely free from the faulty motivations of man. The lawmakers, judges and regulators will no longer control law. Instead, the Prime Law will control the lawmakers, judges, and regulators. Instead of man governing our country, the fundamental nature of protection — the Prime Law — will govern.

The Prime Law

(The Fundamental of Protection)

Preamble

*The purpose of human life is to prosper and live happily.

*The function of government is to provide the conditions that let individuals fulfill that purpose.

*The Prime Law guarantees those conditions by forbidding the use of initiatory force, fraud, or coercion by any person or group against any individual, property, or contract.

Article 1

No person, group of persons, or government shall initiate force, threat of force, or fraud against any individual's self, property, or contract.

Article 2

Force is morally-and-legally justified only for protection from those who violate Article 1.

Article 3

No exceptions shall exist for Articles 1 and 2.

Wealthiest, Healthiest, Safest Society on Earth

Politicians, lawyers, judges, and bureaucrats — flaw-filled creatures — controlling our laws has caused the steady erosion of our beloved freedom and prosperity. The flawless Prime Law permanently removes flaw-filled man from subjectively creating, interpreting, and executing agenda-law and ego-justice. Law and justice must now adhere to protection only — the one and only proper purpose of government.

No longer will flaw-filled politicians, lawyers, judges, and bureaucrats control our laws as, instead, the Prime Law will control our flaw-filled politicians, lawyers, judges and bureaucrats. Perfection will control imperfection.

A protection-only government will spawn a new freedom that will set free a great Technological Revolution that will bring universal wealth and health to America. Furthermore, with full government resources on protection only, Americans will enjoy the safest society on Earth.

The Prime Law was the one missing ingredient our forefathers needed to forever preserve the beautiful country they created. (See the Twelve Visions Party's Prime-Law-Amendment Statement, Chapter Five.)

Every Twelve Visions Party candidate, every elected or appointed Visionary will sign the Twelve Visions Party (TVP) Contract. That TVP Contract binds every Visionary's decision in any local, state, or federal office or position in all branches of government; the TVP Contract binds every Visionary — yes, flaw-filled man — to the Prime Law. (See the TVP Contract, Chapter Four.)

The results of removing flaw-filled man from controlling a government on the offense will be universal wealth, health, and peace. We will instead have a flawless Prime Law of Protection controlling a government of protection and controlling its flaw-filled elected and appointed men and women. Law creation, law interpretation, law enforcement will be held to protection only. Agenda-law, ego-justice, and irrational political-policy regulations will vanish, setting free business and technology to do to all industries what they did to the relatively unregulated computer industry. Americans will become wealthy as their buying power multiplies a hundredfold or more.

That scenario is not a hypothesis; prosperity explosions have occurred among civilizations throughout history by removing flaw-filled man from the controls of government, removing agenda-law, ego-justice, and political-policy regulations and law enforcement. In fact, our country is one example of such an evolutionary leap from a man-controlled monarchy to the nearly flawless law-controlled republic. Of course, a great prosperity-explosion followed, the creation of our country.

Over two centuries later, the Twelve Visions Party gives us an opportunity at the next and final evolutionary leap that completes the evolution away from flaw-filled man-controlled government to flawless law-controlled government. The Prime Law is the one ingredient our forefathers missed. That missing ingredient now guarantees freedom and soaring standards of living forever. Indeed, that missing ingredient makes the U.S. Constitution flawless and finally fully removes flaw-filled man. The U.S. Constitution was the stepping stone; the Prime Law is the capstone. A great prosperity-explosion will follow once again.

The Twelve Visions Party recognizes and captures this opportunity for all people alike... including the poor and the elderly. The Prime Law results in universal wealth for the first time ever on our planet: the next evolution of freedom will bring all Americans a wealthy, healthy, and safe life.

Forbidden Chapter Three

Actualizing Universal Wealth & Health

The Visionaries do have a great vision: we see soaring standards of living; we see all the people becoming wealthy, including the poor. We see all the people gaining good health, including the elderly.

Universal Wealth and Health

In this age of rapidly advancing technologies, in a time when buying power can rapidly soar as we have seen with the computers, Visionaries realize that all citizens can soon experience multiplying buying power and great wealth if the government returns to its one proper purpose of protection only and removes itself from its improper purpose of promoting the “social good”. The full dynamics of this return to a protection-only government and the resulting explosion of freedom and wealth for the people in this age of rapidly advancing technologies can be clearly seen later in this booklet. You will witness why we are the political party to make all the people wealthy and healthy, including the poor and the elderly. Universal wealth and health is now actually possible. The Twelve Visions Party exists to actualize that possibility.

Unprecedented Wealth, Health, and Safety

The mechanics of becoming a protection-only government bring us to our Party Constitution. There, we state that the Visionaries envision a profoundly free, wealthy, healthy, and safe society protected by rule of flawless law. That Prime Law of Protection — no initiatory force — applies to and restricts government itself. Therefore, a government unable to use initiatory force on its people vanquishes all power-building, force-backed, political-policy legislation and regulations for the “social good”. Without force-backed agenda-law, without force-backed political-policy regulations, without force-backed ego-“justice”, then entrepreneurs, businesses, and their super technologies are held back no longer. What we witnessed during the relatively unregulated computer revolution will occur across all industries (including the medical industry) to bring us a great Technological Revolution. For the first time on our planet, a government would set free a great Technological Revolution not just in the computer industry, but in all industries, quickly bringing unprecedented wealth, health, and safety to all citizens.

The Millionaire-Phenomenon

The flawless Prime Law, not flaw-filled men and women, not agenda-and-ego-driven lawmakers, will direct all political decisions and actions and restrict them to protection from initiatory force. At that fundamental essence of government — protect the people from initiatory force — not just politicians and bureaucrats, but all people can determine the proper protection-only laws. Who is in office becomes irrelevant; personal agendas and endless opinions become irrelevant; party affiliation becomes irrelevant; what party holds power becomes irrelevant. The Prime Law of Protection and nothing more remains relevant. Flaw-filled man no longer controls government. The consequences of these decisions and actions locked down to the Prime Law will be staggering as fully demonstrated in the following chapters.

Without agendas, policies, and egos controlling legislation and regulations, the geniuses of society will finally be free to accelerate the Technological Revolution and drive our buying power higher than we have ever seen. This millionaire-phenomenon will come to all people, including the poor, as demonstrated in the following chapters. Other spectacular consequences are shown in the following chapters as well, such as unprecedented health, happiness, love, peace, security, and safety. At the state level, popular planks listed by the Republicans and popular planks listed by the Democrats will either be moved eventually to the private sector if they have nothing to do with the one proper purpose of government — physical protection — or will fall under the Prime Law of Protection.

TVP Planks & Consequences

Rule of Flawless Law to Replace Rule of Flaw-Filled Man: Throughout history, the more that societies moved away from rule of man to rule of rational law, the more prosperity the people enjoyed. The Twelve Visions Party presents and supports the Prime Law. All party members will sign the TVP Contract that binds all decision-making to the Prime Law (Chapter Four). The Prime Law completes the long evolution from rule of flaw-filled man to rule of flawless law. The result will be an unprecedented prosperity-explosion for the people.

Protection-Only Budget: Imagine all taxpayers' dollars and government's efforts going toward protection, which includes protection-only legislation, police, courts, and prisons. Crime would decrease dramatically. Taxes would decrease dramatically. The geniuses of society, without the bogus government-on-the-offense holding them back, would cause our wealth and health to soar. (The following chapters give a better understanding of the unprecedented wealth that will result from the Protection-Only Budget and its government-on-the-defense. The principle applies at both the federal and state levels.)

Depoliticize and Deregulate: End politicization and regulation of our lives and businesses. Get down to the one proper purpose of any government: protection from initiatory force, threat of force, or fraud. By removing the bogus purpose of government, specifically regulatory programs for the “social good”, the Twelve Visions Party removes the massive and improper government control over our lives and businesses. By getting government out of our lives and out of our businesses altogether, we free the geniuses of society to do wonderful things for us, as follows:

Unprecedented Security: The people will be well taken care of by the geniuses of society, rising by the many millions as the Twelve Visions Party ends most government regulations. The millions of freed geniuses will drive technologies into new dimensions that bring undreamt of values to the people.

Universal Wealth: The costs for those new technologies will keep falling toward zero, similar to the computers during the original computer revolution. The great Technological Revolution will happen in all industries and make ordinary people more and more wealthy as costs in all industries keep falling.

Universal Health: The new technologies, racing ahead in all industries, will especially race ahead in the medical industry without the destructive cost-prohibitive FDA regulations holding the geniuses back. The geniuses will eradicate disease after disease, and their soaring new technologies will drive down medical costs. People will live with increasingly better health for increasingly longer lives.

Job Explosion & Evolution: Businesses will strive to keep up in the rapid progress of the great Technological Revolution; everything will change as businesses, to stay competitive, concentrate on bringing out their greatest asset — the unique creativity of their employees. Ordinary people will experience exhilarating entrepreneurial-like jobs at their places of work, and they will love going to work as they discover the creation-driven life, the life they were meant to live.

Extraordinary Marriages & Love: The wonderful falling-in-love feelings in the early weeks of romantic relationships will tend to return. Why? People will rise from a life stuck in stagnation. They will rise into the creation-driven life of their dreams. With that growing source of happiness inside, filling them and overflowing into their romantic relationships, they will forever feel the power of love.

Educating Geniuses: Our children and grandchildren will become “smarter” than today’s smartest people. In tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions-World education, children will be taught how to integrate knowledge to build success and lead themselves. They will see through illusions and will no longer need or want to be led by “authorities”. The need for a ruling class and its regulations will become repulsive to the graduating self-leaders tomorrow. Our children will grow up to live a creation-driven life — the happy and prosperous life they were meant to live. The old structure of education cannot compete against the new mentality and yields to the coming schools of geniuses. (To understand more on education, see Chapter Nine as well as Mark Hamilton’s Twelve Visions.)

Eradicating Crime & Terrorism: The fear of terrorism will rapidly decline, and crime will nearly cease. The Twelve Visions Party will concentrate every action and every dollar towards one purpose: protect the people from initiatory force, as declared in the Prime Law found in every TVP State Constitution. Safer-living statistics will soar.

Conclusion

When a 20th-century visionary (Henry Ford) discovered that the workers should not manage the work, rather the work should manage the workers...society experienced an enormous prosperity-explosion. Mass production was created, which accelerated the Industrial Revolution. The people's buying power — their wealth — skyrocketed.

When a 21st-century visionary (Mark Hamilton) discovered that the flaw-filled lawmakers, judges, and bureaucrats should not control the laws,¹ rather the flawless Prime Law should control the flaw-filled lawmakers, judges, and bureaucrats...society became poised to experience another enormous prosperity-explosion. Unleashed geniuses of society and nonrestricted super technologies will be created, which will accelerate the Technological Revolution. Once again, the people's buying power — their wealth — will skyrocket. (The following chapters will give a clear demonstration of this millionaire-phenomenon for ordinary people.)

Indeed, the Twelve Visions Party is the Party to make the people rich, including the poor. That is our Vision! We have reached a rare moment in time and technology that could literally make all people wealthy. The Twelve Visions Party clearly recognizes and reaches for the switch to ignite the prosperity-explosion.

¹Misinterpretation of the U.S. Constitution, often through ego "justice", steadily opened the way for lawmakers and justices to control lawmaking. The Prime Law forever ends that steady, backward trend from the rule of law to the rule of man. Rule of law — the Prime Law of Protection — will permanently reassert itself as an amendment to the U.S. Constitution (Chapter Five).

Forbidden Chapter Four

The Universal-Wealth Movement & The TVP Contract

The Twelve Visions Party with its Prime Law and Protection-Only Budget understands government's final evolution into providing protection and only protection, the purpose of government, without flaw-filled man in control. As a result, as shown throughout the following chapters, removing flaw-filled man from the controls of government means average Americans will live like millionaires without lifting a finger. Everyone will become rich, including the poor.

Indeed, when you get down to the irreducible fundamental of something, such as a protection-only government, a paradigm shift sometimes occurs with almost magical benefits. Consider this example, an analogy to the Prime Law and the resulting wealth we will enjoy:

In the early 20th century when Henry Ford got down to the fundamental nature of production — down to the physical movements of production — the assemblyline emerged and caused a paradigm shift from handmade production to mass production. Ford identified, “Do not let the workers manage the work; instead, let the work manage the workers.” And that changed EVERYTHING. A national prosperity-explosion followed.

In the early 21st century, when I (the author, Mark Hamilton) got down to the fundamental nature of government — down to the physical protection of the individual and his property — the Prime Law emerged, which will cause a paradigm shift from rule of man to rule of law, flawless law. I identified, “Do not let flaw-filled politicians, judges, bureaucrats manage the law; instead, let the flawless Prime Law manage the politicians, judges, bureaucrats.” And that will change EVERYTHING. A national prosperity-explosion will follow, a freedom paradigm accompanied by an unhindered Technological Revolution in which buying power will multiply a hundredfold or more. The computer revolution was a preview of what can come to all industries.

Now let us take a close look at the political party itself. To do so, I must express my thoughts and feelings directly to you. For a long time, I dreaded the idea of launching a political party. I knew that all people, including loyal Visionaries, including myself, were flaw-filled men and women with all our shortcomings, vulnerabilities, and temptations. We are human, and human beings are not perfect. How could the Twelve Visions Party survive the faults of its members and officials? The answer, I continued to conclude, was: it will not survive the faults of man.

How could my new political-party idea ever work? Finally, I realized I needed to take the fundamental decision-making away from party members, yes, away from the Visionaries themselves! In other words, “Do not let the Visionaries (imperfect, flaw-filled man) manage the law; instead, let the unchanging flawless Prime Law manage the Visionaries!” Yes! With the fundamental law of protection — the Prime Law — I could do this! The Twelve Visions Party could now work and truly bring the millionaire-phenomenon to the people!

To control this movement, all Party members who run for office or service in any way must sign the TVP Contract below that assures every decision is made according to the Prime Law.

Now, the Political Party will work beautifully. The Twelve Visions Party can now actualize the unprecedented opportunity to make all people rich, including the poor. Indeed, we are at a unique moment in time and technology in which the Twelve Visions Party can ignite a never-before-seen prosperity-explosion.

The TVP Contract

Premise: A Protection-Only Government will lead to the people's greatest prosperity (as demonstrated in Twelve Visions, SOS Books, Mark Hamilton, 410 pages). That is reality. The many opinions and agendas of man cannot alter reality. Yet, while creating, interpreting, and executing law, the attempt to alter reality is continually made: this law...that interpretation... these regulations will improve the people's prosperity...I promise! Whether innocent or not, those sound-good, "social good" government actions beyond protection increasingly control us and slowly kill our freedoms, bit by bit, day after day, steadily aging our country, leading to its eventual death.

The purpose of the TVP contract is to establish the reality of protection, which is the one proper purpose of government. We establish the reality of protection through the unchanging Prime Law of no initiatory force, which controls both the selfish and selfless lawmakers, lawyers, judges, and bureaucrats and their endless opinions, biases, agendas, ambitions, egos, desires, delusions and illusions. No longer will those flaw-filled men and women control law and politics!

Contract: I, _____, pledge to subordinate all my many preconceived thoughts, despite how strongly I feel, despite whether I believe with certainty or with reservation, for with external and internal confusions and illusions that accompany a power-based government, I honestly acknowledge that always reaching the proper decision is merely impossible. In serving my Party's objective to return to a protection-only government in order to unleash an unprecedented prosperity-explosion that will make all the people rich, including the poor, I fully understand the mechanics come down to consistently, always without exception, supporting the biologically irreducible fundamental act of protection — the Prime Law of no initiatory force as spelled out in the State Constitution of my Twelve Visions Party. That Prime Law of Protection must control the lawmakers, law interpreters, and law executers, not the other way around. Therefore, every decision I make — even if it goes against the very grain of my mind, heart, and soul — will be purely made based on serving the Prime Law. I realize, in the end, that policy will bring forth our vision to make all the people wealthy, healthy, and safe including the poor, as articulated in the TVP National Platform. Again, that policy will bring forth our vision of a profoundly free, wealthy, healthy, and safe society as fully articulated in Twelve Visions.

If I knowingly go against the Prime Law of protection only for any decision for any reason whatsoever, or if I show a trend of "unknowingly" going against the Prime Law, which is mostly self-evident, the Twelve Visions Party will immediately and publicly disown me and will no longer recognize me as a member.

Lawmakers — man — must not control law. Men and women controlling law can lead to anything, can take a country anywhere, even to the point where it becomes law to kill others, as we have seen around the world, throughout history. Man with his many faults of ego, greed, envy, and innocent lack of knowledge and his many vulnerabilities must not control laws and interpret the Constitution. Man controlling law, with all his vulnerabilities and faults, has always been a recipe for destruction. No, the Prime Law of protection must control the lawmakers. If we want to live, for the first time, in a universally wealthy, healthy, happy, peaceful, safe, and truly free society, then the Prime Law of protection must ultimately become the political point of origin, “the decision maker”, not man, not me. Political decisions bound to the Prime Law will effectively minimize crime and eventually end initiatory force including agenda-law and political-policy regulations based on initiatory force, thus unleashing the geniuses of society and their technologies, catapulting our standards of living, buying power, wealth and health for all people, including the poor. That is our Vision.

All members running for office, appointed to office, or serving in any way must sign below to abide by the Prime Law for every decision, in quest of our vision. Indeed, we the Visionaries must completely commit ourselves to the Prime Law today via this contract; we must bring the Prime Law to each of the fifty states tomorrow via our State Constitutions; we must bring the Prime Law to our Federal government eventually via an Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which would act as the overarching de facto Constitution of America (explained in Chapter Five). Visionaries must ultimately bring the Prime Law to the entire world, country by country, forever ending war. The Prime Law means permanent wealth, health, and peace.

Sign here

Member of The Twelve Visions Party

Forbidden Chapter Five
The Prime-Law Amendment will bring Undreamt of Wealth, Health, Safety to all including
The Poor, the Elderly, the Underprivileged

The one proper purpose of government is protection against initiatory force, coercion and fraud. Any other purpose ultimately depends upon initiatory force, which takes away our freedom and, therefore, our prosperity. (That fact is demonstrated in Twelve Visions, SOS Books, Mark Hamilton, 410 pages).

Indeed, the freer a country, the more prosperous, as shown throughout history. For the first time with the Prime Law, we are talking about a protection-only government and, therefore, a fully free country. There has NEVER been a fully free country on our planet.

Moreover, for the first time, we have reached the technology to experience a universal prosperity-explosion as first seen in the computer industry. If technology is set free to rapidly advance, we can ignite that prosperity-explosion in all industries. Prices will begin falling to fractions as happened to the computers. Buying power will soar. People's buying power — all people's buying power — will multiply a hundredfold. They will become rich, including the poor (see the demonstration in Chapter Seven.)

America originally rose quickly and was so much freer and more prosperous than other countries because it was a country brilliantly controlled by nearly flawless rule of law and not subjected to flaw-filled rule of man as so many other countries.

Yes, man is full of faults, motivated by ego, tugged toward temptations, attracted to easy money, corruption and dishonesty. Man is imperfect, including all Visionaries.

Therefore, the Twelve Visions Party takes America's rule of law one step further: By going down to the biological fundamental of protection — no initiatory force — the Prime-Law Amendment would end lawmakers from recklessly creating new laws that have nothing to do with protection, and the Prime Law would end justices from recklessly interpreting law and opening the door for government to control us through "social good", and the Prime Law would stop bureaucrats from establishing regulations based on political policy instead of the one proper fundamental of protection from initiatory force. For, any law or interpretation or enforcement beyond protection against initiatory force requires force. The Prime Law takes America's rule of law all the way and ensures a pure, protection-only government. A pure, protection-only government will ignite the universal prosperity-explosion. The flawless Prime-Law was the final rule-of-law integration the founding fathers missed.

The Prime Law has the potential to become an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, where the Prime Law has belonged since the creation of the U.S. Constitution. Let us take a close look at that possibility:

The U.S. Constitution's three main principles of inherent rights, government by the people, and separation of powers provided the basis for the freest and most prosperous nation in history. Just imagine two centuries ago the new ideas of a nation created to ensure a person's right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness as written in the Declaration of Independence, a nation governed by the people, a nation with watchdog checks and balances on political and bureaucratic powers.

The delegates of the Constitutional Convention in 1787 also gave careful consideration to the division of power between the federal government and state governments. The U.S. Constitution, which emerged from the Constitutional Convention in 1787, is called the supreme law because the state constitutions and both federal and state laws cannot violate the U.S. Constitution.

The U.S. Constitution does a nearly perfect job setting down the principles and system of government. Things went wrong because of continual misinterpretation of the Constitution over generations, which led to repeated violations of the Constitution. What was missing was an overarching constitution, so to speak, the prime law of no initiatory force.

Had the Prime Law existed since the beginning, our country would have entered the wealthy/healthy/safe Twelve-Visions World generations ago.

If the Prime Law eventually becomes an amendment to the U.S. Constitution — the Prime-Law Amendment — we could again have confidence in the U.S. Constitution, for it brilliantly sets down the system of government and separation of powers, starting with the three main powers of 1) making laws, 2) executing laws, and 3) interpreting laws.

There would be, however, a fundamental change with the Prime-Law Amendment: The whole concept of a government based on power — separation of powers, division of powers, checks and balances of powers — would change from a government based on power to a government based on service. That fundamental change from a power basis to a service basis would evolve a businesslike system — a businesslike protection service — as detailed in Twelve Visions (SOS Books, Mark Hamilton, 410 pages).

Let us take a closer look at what the Prime-Law Amendment would accomplish. First, as identified in the following chapters, over the past century, our government existed for two purposes:

- 1) To protect the people
- 2) To promote the social good

To promote the general welfare of the people has been misinterpreted to mean: increase their standards of living or their wealth. Well, as demonstrated in the following chapters, politicians cannot do that; the government cannot and should not exist to enhance social well-being, not beyond physical protection, which includes justice and proper lawmaking, both criminal and civil. Indeed, our politicians spend our money ostensibly for the “social good”, but they really want the glory and power and importance that goes with spending money. The evidence is clear: they do not want anything to do with the deeper effort that goes with soundly spending money. The repeated misinterpretations of the U.S. Constitution has led to blatant violations of the Constitution, which could never occur with the Prime Law in place.

So, career politicians with the help of federal justices and regulatory bureaucrats have made a mess of things. Our well-being, standard of living, and wealth can be dramatically lifted by unhampered market businessmen and women...by the geniuses of society.

But the erroneous second purpose of government must end.

That bogus purpose of government to so-call “promote the social good” sprang up over the years through career politicians finding ways to spend money and become more and more likable for re-election. (See the James J. Hill story in Chapter Seven.) The Prime-Law Amendment gets rid of all that, forever.

The one valid purpose for our government, as you know, is to protect the people from initiatory force, which includes providing justice. The only way to guarantee the protection of all people — equal, unbiased and unconditional protection of all people of all races and all social classes and all career positions in society — is to protect the individual. Regardless of race or social status, the Prime Law guarantees everyone his or her unprejudiced rights as an individual, as a minority of one — the smallest of all minorities. Every individual is equally and fully protected.

Now, to provide comprehensive protection of the individual requires going down to and establishing the biologically irreducible fundamental of protection. As an analogy, to capture the comprehensive nature of the cosmos requires going down to and understanding the irreducible, fundamental sub-atomic particles composing the cosmos. The irreducible, thus indivisible, incorruptible fundamental of protection is: elimination of initiatory force, which is the function of the Prime-Law Amendment. There is nothing deeper upon which to argue opinions or agendas. The Prime Law says it all. There is nothing more.

Indeed, comprehensive protection of the individual demands one prime law — one overarching, irreducible law: the elimination of initiatory force against the individual and his property. With that one prime law, everyone becomes protected from intentional harm caused by man, including harm from government.

Therefore, with the passing of the Prime-Law Amendment, the erroneous purpose of government and its destructive ruling-class of man can never return. Prosperity will soar forever as described throughout the National Platform. What great news! Indeed, one prime law was always needed; one prime law eternally guarantees protection and freedom. That one Prime Law could bring about the Twelve-Visions World (described in Twelve Visions, the book) if that Prime Law were to become an amendment to the U.S. Constitution, the Prime-Law Amendment.

With that one Prime Law in place, it essentially becomes our Supreme Law to which every law must answer. For, the Supreme Law will filter out every law and regulation in violation, namely those that serve the bogus purpose of so-called promoting the “social good”, agenda-law which requires initiatory force. The Prime Law is the biological fundamental, the point of origin, the beginning of all law. Therefore, no further unhealthy law or misinterpretation of the U.S. Constitution could occur. No more agenda-law, political-policy regulations, or ego-justice...no more violations could happen. Government could not tell us how to spend our money or force us to pay taxes. As long as we did not commit initiatory force, we would be completely free. We would not need ego-and-power-driven lawmakers stirring up legislation with lawyers and bureaucrats using those laws to control us and drain us. We would no longer need that parasitical ruling-class of man that destroyed our yet-unknown prosperity. Their deceptions could no longer pass through the Prime-Law Amendment — including their forced taxes.

Our government would cease to house a parasitical ruling-class of man as we switched over to the Protection-Only Budget (described in the next chapter) that ends the funds for the bogus second purpose of government — to so-call promote the “social good”. The Protection-Only Budget supplies funds to the one proper purpose of government — to protect the country and its citizens from initiatory force, which includes the proper protection-based lawmaking and system of justice, forever unable to violate the Prime Law.

Now, what guarantees our government could never again grow a ruling class? Government can grow a ruling class only through force — pay your taxes or go to prison. With the passing of the Prime-Law Amendment, not even the government could use initiatory force and, therefore, would forever cease to be a ruling class. Instead, with the passing of the Prime-Law Amendment, the government would function as a protection service you voluntarily pay for. Twelve Visions, the book, explains exactly how that would happen.

Gone would be the days of bogus and destructive government, government on the offense so-called promoting the “social good”. Market businesspersons — the geniuses of society — would successfully take over that job of promoting the social good as shown in Chapter Seven. Then, our new government would forever provide the one specific value of protection, which its citizens — its customers — would voluntarily pay for. People will gladly pay for safety and peace.

Realize, the Protection-Only Budget described in the next chapter would not be enough to permanently end the ruling class. The government could regress into a corrupt ruling class again eventually if government could use initiatory force against its citizens with a force-backed IRS. In short, that ugly rise of the ruling class is what happened to our original, beautiful U.S. Government idea meant to exist for protection only. The Prime-Law Amendment would forever stop the ruling class from happening again. Indeed, the Prime-Law Amendment pulls out the roots of the ruling class — initiatory force, which includes forced taxes.

Without forced tax collection, government power is not a ruling power. Instead, it is an earned power, earned from ever-looming, potential competition. Our Twelve-Visions Government is nonthreatening to its citizens — to its customers — and is incorruptible.

With initiatory force permanently out of the equation of government due to the Prime-Law Amendment, the government (i.e., man) can hold no ruling power and can never again hold ruling power over you whatsoever. For the first time, you will be truly free.

The Twelve-Visions Government will eventually evolve into a reputable business providing the immense value of protection — peace and safety — a priceless value citizens will gladly choose to pay for. If you were unhappy with the protection service, you could withdraw and not pay...and not be a criminal. If enough people did that, a competitive service would rise to guarantee protection — better protection. Those free-market dynamics would force tomorrow’s government to provide honest and satisfactory value to you. Those free-market dynamics would guarantee your best protection, including national defense and local police protection as demonstrated in Twelve Visions, the book.

With the Prime-Law Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, the prosperity-explosion described in the following chapters would never end. Now, you will read about the wealth, happiness, love, and health you could soon experience. The following chapters deliver the actual Forbidden System that will allow ordinary people to live the wealthy, healthy, and safe lives they were meant to live.

Forbidden Chapter Six

Multiply Our Buying Power A Thousandfold

We have reached a special place in time: the idea of real, universal wealth and health can actually happen, and the Twelve Visions Party is highly aware of this unprecedented opportunity. We have identified two paths to universal wealth, health, and security:

Path 1) The ratification of the Prime Law as an amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The Prime-Law Amendment will filter out the bogus second purpose of government. Without the bogus second purpose of government, the ruling class of flaw-filled man and the rule of flaw-filled man will end in light of the rule of flawless law, the Prime Law. Geniuses of society would no longer be held back and would be free to multiply our buying power...up to a thousandfold, as first seen in the uniquely free computer industry. Multiplying our buying power even a hundredfold would bring Americans universal wealth, health, and security.

Path 2) The process of amending the U.S. Constitution, for all practical purposes, must start with Congress. Therefore, the Prime-Law Amendment will have to wait for the Great Replacement Program to occur first, as described in this chapter. A second, more rapid path to universal wealth, health, and security comes from the Executive Branch, from the President, specifically from his Protection-Only Budget, as described in this chapter. The scenario described in this chapter could happen swiftly (remember Perot's near tipping point in '92). The passing of the President's Protection-Only Budget will effectively cut off the bogus second purpose of government, as described within. Passing the Protection-Only Budget, effectively depoliticizing and deregulating America, will also end the ruling-class of flaw-filled man and free the geniuses of society. They will do for all industries what they did for the mostly nonpoliticized, mostly unregulated computer industry: they will multiply our buying power a thousandfold, making all Americans wealthy. The Great Replacement Program would follow, and the Prime-Law Amendment would then follow, bringing our country, for the first time, rule of flawless law, permanently locking down the conditions of universal wealth, health, and security. That Forbidden System to unprecedented wealth for ordinary people is described within. For the first time, what you are reading here about universal wealth, health, and security is not political rhetoric. It is your destiny.

So, let us view your destiny of wealth, health, and peace. ...Just before we do, however, I must take a moment to form the ground for your remaining journey through this opening to the life you were meant to live: Consistently since the early 1980s, I have spent long days developing Twelve Visions, a 410-page magnum opus that reveals twelve visions of the future — of your destiny. Twelve Visions uses a unique blend of past and present facts that snap together like pieces to a puzzle.

Consider that, as with any forming puzzle, a point will come when you can see what the completed puzzle-picture will look like, even before all the pieces are snapped into place. Knowing what the picture looks like before it is all there is seeing into the future. You can actually describe the missing portion of the puzzle-picture — describe the future. This ability to show you a puzzle-picture — an accurate vision of the future — is called Neothink. I developed and perfected Neothink over the past quarter century.

I used this Neothink puzzle-building technique to build Twelve Visions — a complete puzzle-picture showing us our future. I reveal a country of wealthy, healthy, and safe citizens (and much more) resulting from very specific psychological and political changes. The pages that follow contain selected portions from four of my Twelve Neothink Visions; they show us exactly how to bring the people, even the poor, remarkable wealth, health, and peace.

Indeed, the remaining four chapters consist of the Tenth, Eleventh, and parts of the Ninth and Twelfth Visions from Twelve Visions and show you the puzzle-picture of your life tomorrow.

As you begin, realize there may be a few words and concepts you do not fully understand that were developed in the first eight visions, but just continue reading. We will begin with the Eleventh Vision...

Unstoppable Universal Wealth

“That’s the technology paradox: Businesses can thrive at the very moment when their prices are falling the fastest. ‘The only thing that matters is if the exponential growth of your market is faster than the exponential decline of your prices,’ says George M.C. Fisher, chairman and CEO of Eastman Kodak Co. The challenge is enormous, he says. ‘Companies have to project out: How will I be competitive in a world (in which) technology will be virtually free?’

“The new rules require more than ingenuity, agility, and speed. They call for redefining value in an economy where the cost of raw technology is plummeting toward zero. Sooner or later, this plunge will obliterate the worth of almost any specific piece of hardware or software. Then, value will be in establishing a long-term relationship with a customer — even if it means giving the first generation of a product away.”

— Business Week

“The Technology Paradox: How Companies Thrive As Prices Dive”

Many new technologies bombarded my thoughts as the Eleventh Vision came to me. A great competitive storm of super rapidly evolving new technologies in tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World caused consumer prices to fall to fractions.

With the success of the Twelve Visions Party, the famous free-falling prices of computers and communications spread beyond the computer industry across many old industries and all new industries, reaching nearly all consumer products. Then, even modest paychecks and savings were worth a fortune.

Well, you got rich, without lifting a finger, in that Twelve-Visions World. The computer revolution was a forerunner to a Technological Revolution that drove prices toward zero and values toward infinity in most industries.

Today, people wonder where the Technological Revolution will take us. America’s richest man and other powerful people predict mind-boggling technological transformations culminating in a distance-free world. They are right: the walls of distance have nearly come down as digitized information traveling through broadband fiber-optic cables and between personal satellite dishes let us work, learn, shop, and play anywhere in the world, anytime, regardless where we live. But those visionaries have limited insight into what will really happen. They do not predict the enormous wealth.

The very large financial benefits of ending the ruling class brings increasing pressure for people to turn to the Twelve Visions Party. The most powerful and fastest moving trends throughout history were economically driven. As this monetarily motivated trend to end the ruling class grows, my Eleventh Vision showed me big government eventually could not hold. My Vision showed me that during the first quarter of the twenty-first century, big government popped off society like a champagne cork. Suddenly, millions of super entrepreneurs spouted forth, out of nowhere. They were the first to jump into the Neothink mentality. During my Eleventh Vision, those millions of freed super entrepreneurs caused a catalytic progression of tomorrow's super technologies, which caused a catalytic explosion of buying power.

The era of inexpensive super technologies showered upon us. Cost-collapsing telecommunications, fiber optics, digitized information, super-powered personal computers, the Internet, robotics, the Genome Project...those were only a few small clouds at the turn of the millennium before a giant storm of competitive geniuses and their super technologies. With the success of the Twelve Visions Party, the geniuses feverishly competed day and night against each other to bring us breathtaking values for just a few dollars or less. When the technological storm began, more and more affordable super technologies showered upon us day after day, our buying power soared, and it never came back down once lifted by the great technological twister.

Our lifestyles became our previous fantasies as our buying power kept soaring until we lived like millionaires, including the poor. All along, the only thing that prevented our millionaire-like lifestyles was big government.

Until the success of the Twelve Visions Party, throughout the twentieth century and into the twenty-first century, most industries and their technologies were terribly burdened by big government — by regulation, legislation, litigation, taxes. Most industries and technologies had long been politicized; the computer/Internet industry had not (although there was a growing attempt, starting with the infamous antitrust lawsuit brought against Microsoft).

Without carrying the same burden, the geniuses in the computer field easily jumped ahead. And that was the difference that allowed prices to miraculously race toward zero.

That was a preview to the Technological Revolution that will happen with the success of the Twelve Visions Party. Over the next three pages are three oversimplified images that flashed before me during my Eleventh Vision: (Author's Note: Although grossly oversimplified, these flash mental images occurred during my Neothinking process and do make the basic point. The Department of Homeland Security was created after my Eleventh Vision had occurred. Therefore, that executive department does not show up on the following images.)

Bugs in Society Holding Back The Millionaire Phenomenon

Tomorrow's Make - The - People - Millionaires Megatrend To Rid The Bugs

Millionaire Phenomenon Will Make The People Live Like Millionaires

During 21st Century

My Eleventh Vision showed me technologies in all areas of life free to race ahead in the way the computers had. In that Twelve-Visions Society of rapidly advancing technologies, living costs fell to fractions in the way the computers had. Buying power in all areas of life multiplied a hundred times or more. I saw ordinary people living like millionaires in custom homes, driving luxury cars, and vacationing all over the world first class. Even the poor enjoyed the gifts of life.

One man had the power to quickly bring us into that Twelve-Visions World where poverty and suffering no longer existed and Americans lived in luxury. That man was the President of the United States. In the twentieth century and early twenty-first century, no President would initiate the millionaire phenomenon because no career politician would slash his own base of power. But now, we have seen a sample of the great prosperity:

The regulatory seams around society restrict new technologies and hold back the Technological Revolution. Those regulatory seams holding back the Technological Revolution also postpone the job revolution and block a hundred million super entrepreneurs (explained in the Fifth Vision). When big government disintegrated with the success of the Twelve Visions Party, modern technologies burst out everywhere and mixed with millions of unleashed super entrepreneurs using Neothink. The overwhelming creativity, pumped into the new supersociety, generated prosperity that went off the charts, beyond anything ever contemplated in economic think tanks. Even the poorest Americans experienced enormous wealth.

You Became 100 Times Richer

My Eleventh Vision showed me that by honing in on the national budget alone, our buying power could be catapulted a hundred times or more! We have to do nothing! Let us start with a brief overview of what makes up the national budget:

Your taxes break down into mandatory spending programs such as Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, means-tested entitlements such as Food Stamps, Supplemental Security Income, Child Nutrition, veterans' pensions; and the remaining mandatory spending mainly consists of Federal retirement and insurance programs, unemployment insurance, and payments to farmers. All those Federal entitlement programs, programs ostensibly for the social good, add up to more than half of all federal government spending in the early twenty-first century. The discretionary spending breaks down into defense spending for the military and non-defense discretionary spending, which covers the Legislative Branch, the Judicial Branch, the Executive Branch, including its fifteen executive departments, the EPA, NASA, foreign aid, science... basically whatever it costs to run the Federal government. Then, of course, there is interest on the national debt. Discretionary spending, which is what it costs to run the military and the government, plus the interest on the national debt, add up to less than half of all federal spending in the early twenty-first century.

Finally, federal spending usually creates either a surplus or a deficit, meaning it collects more than it spends in the case of a surplus, or it spends more than it collects, in the case of a deficit. Growing deficits mean growing debt, which means growing interest payments.

Now, let us look at my Eleventh Vision that showed me how to approach the budget to cause our buying power to soar a hundred times or more, without us lifting a finger!

My Eleventh Vision showed me the most sensational creation of wealth the world has ever known. I saw a Twelve-Visions President slash government spending by nearly removing the entitlement spending programs and the majority of non-defense discretionary spending. He was very careful that, first, those who had earned entitlements such as social security and veterans' pensions were fully compensated through a spectacular sale of all government assets that had nothing to do with protection. With the trillions of dollars accumulated from the largest sale in mankind's history, social security that was owed was paid off completely, up front and in full, plus interest. Then, the Social Security program ended all together, for the government had no business telling people how to spend or save their money. Veterans' pensions were continued, but managed through a private, third-party service.

The budget to run the government was eventually reduced over 50% to essential laws, courts, prisons, Federal police, intelligence, defense...everything needed to protect the individual's peace and safety. The military (including veterans' pensions), courts, prisons, and legitimate lawmaking protected the people from initiatory force. Protecting the people from initiatory force and coercion is, in the long run, the only valid purpose of a federal government. Eventually, all functions of government beyond such protection evolved into a businesslike setup, as described in my Neothink trilogy Superpuzzle. People willingly subscribed to those services.

During this Twelve-Visions President's term, there was no chaos. (The President had a two-year battle with Congress over the budget, but the mid-term elections washed out many of those resisting the President's budget as the people noticed their buying power rising.) Instead, he simplified the Federal Government. The country fell into beautiful order as he led the privatization of many government services. Moreover, great prosperity — the millionaire phenomenon — swept across the country as businesses and entrepreneurs were free to invest in research and development without the burden and risk of an offensive, regulatory government.

Big business and garage entrepreneurs both developed new technologies so swiftly, with such rapidly dropping costs, that our buying power began climbing...climbing so rapidly, in fact, poor people previously dependent on government entitlements instead soon lived with the standards of living of millionaires by the end of the Twelve-Visions President's term. Soon, no one missed big government, not even the most liberal communities. Everyone was too busy enjoying his or her new standard of living...a standard of living only the millionaires enjoyed just one presidential term earlier. A new era had arrived, the Twelve-Visions Era.

In the Eleventh Vision, looking back at today's budgets, we knew what defense spending and interest on the national debt were for. But, we had a hard time understanding the spending programs for the "social good" or for much of non-defense government. For one thing, tomorrow we knew the best way to help the people was to release the geniuses to make the people rich: to make their buying power go so high they lived like millionaires.

Tomorrow our make-the-people-millionaires program freed technologies and freed super entrepreneurs to drive the new technologies into computerlike revolutions everywhere for everyone. A Twelve-Visions President whose career was not politics turned inward and slashed his own base of political power — regulatory power — to free the technologies and the super entrepreneurs.

To be the President of the United States before the Twelve-Visions World was to be a career politician; the career politician by nature built his base of political power, and the President's base of political power was regulatory power — the regulatory bureaucracies, commissions, and agencies beneath him. That was why no president seriously wanted to eliminate most regulations. Social and regulatory programs supposedly "for the public good" supported the President's and Congress' base of power. Those spending programs, even those entitlement programs such as social welfare, came hand in hand with massive regulations telling us how to spend our money and run our businesses. Unbeknownst to you, but so obvious to me during my Eleventh Vision, those regulations actually blocked the Twelve-Visions World in which you would live as a millionaire.

Those so-called "help the people" social and regulatory programs were illusions that actually hurt the people while building the Presidents' popularity, ego, and power. In my Eleventh Vision, I was amazed that the "great" presidents of the twentieth century who started "noble" social programs for the "social good" were looked back upon as the worst malefactors of society.

The Biggest Illusion

Today, the massive Federal spending programs on entitlements so-called “for the social good” in turn give the Federal Government absolute power to regulate the economy and rule over our money. The Federal Government has its regulatory web all throughout our economy — in every business, every consumer product, every job, every profession, including every hospital, every doctor’s office, every research and development program, every discovery, every invention, every paycheck, every person’s wallet.

In my Eleventh Vision, the people in tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World were aghast that politicians and bureaucrats once ruled over our money and our lives. The archaic regulatory web throughout the economy trapped and paralyzed new technologies.

Without super rapidly advancing technologies, costs did not drop to fractions. Instead, costs went up and up and up for the entire twentieth century. We just could not believe it, looking back: prices went up for 100 years! The elderly who lived on set pensions and measly entitlements got trapped in the dungeons of society as long-term inflation ate up everything they had.

Sometime in the twenty-first century, we discovered that the only way to truly help the needy and everyone else was to send the economy through a buying-power metamorphosis such as the computer industry’s buying-power metamorphosis. The Eleventh Vision showed me the needy and everyone else’s limited buying power leapt a hundred times when the Twelve-Visions President’s Protection-Only Budget swished away the regulatory web throughout the economy. His budget swished away those so-called “good intentions”, such as social welfare and the regulatory bureaucracies that wove regulatory control throughout every nook and cranny of the business world. When that regulatory web was gone, technology was free, and it took off just as the unregulated computer technology had, but in every industry. Everyone’s buying power quickly rose. (This ended Social Security payments. Moreover, this unique approach miraculously repaid every penny of social security to Americans with full fair-market interest! That financial miracle meant elderly Americans received a small fortune from the government, all up front, by selling off all government assets that had nothing to do with protection.)

The World’s Greatest Irony

The world’s greatest irony was: the way to best help the people was to cross out the government’s programs to “help the people” and the massive regulations that came with those “well intentioned” massive spending programs. Indeed, ending the noble-sounding “higher” causes, those programs for the “social good”, ultimately ended the destructive elite class ruling over us, suppressing us. Our Twelve-Visions Government reduced to its original and proper purpose of individual protection — protecting the peace.

And when that happened, look what happened next: My Eleventh Vision showed me an amazing world without those regulatory webs of “good intentions” so-called “for the social good”. The needy and everyone else lived like “kings” as unburdened technology soared, costs plunged, and everyone’s buying power multiplied on average a hundred times. Everyone became rich...yes, including the poor. It was the only program that could ever make the poor live like millionaires.

The “social good” was just a clever way of saying “politicize society, rule over the people, and play God with their money, morals, and lives.” The “social good” was the career politicians’ and regulatory bureaucrats’ prime illusion that manipulated our century-old mental programming for “higher” causes.

Sometime in the twenty-first century, we deprogrammed our minds with Neothink and, like coming out of a spell, we shook our heads and said “enough” to spending more than half of the Federal Budget on the “social good”.

Ending The Spell

The first Twelve-Visions President ended politicization of our lives and ended government on the offense — ended entitlement and regulatory programs. The Twelve-Visions President reduced government to self-defense protection only, a government of defense without an active ruling class telling us how to live. That move freed the geniuses of society.

They, in turn, whirled into an aggressive storm of Neothink competition to serve up our every need. In doing so, they lifted technology into new dimensions, which drove down living and health costs to fractions and brought us spectacular new values and entertainment. The computer revolution of the twentieth century seemed like a little white cloud compared to the storm of new technologies raining on us in the twenty-first century.

As you know, after World War II, we looked back in disbelief at the holocaust. In tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World, our children and grandchildren looked back in disbelief at today’s politicians and bureaucrats ruling over us. In both cases, millions of innocent people died at the hands of politicians and bureaucrats ruling over us. Everyone, everywhere, in my Eleventh Vision knew the only reason the disease-free, wealthy Twelve-Visions World never happened in the twentieth century was because, simply put, no politicians wanted to slash their base of political power. They cared only about building their base of power — regulatory, legislative, and spending power. (Indeed, spending money they did not earn brought them enormous power and prestige.) Therefore, we did not have the slightest clue of the phenomenal wealth and health available to us by reducing to a protection-only government of defense...until the “Solar Eclipse”:

The “Solar Eclipse”

Consider that Einstein’s Theory of Relativity ($E=mc^2$) went years unrecognized. Then, a natural phenomenon occurred — a solar eclipse — that demonstrated his theory. Instantly, Einstein and his Theory of General Relativity were a world sensation accepted by nearly everyone. With that solar-eclipse demonstration, the world quickly moved beyond Newtonian physics to Einsteinian physics.

During my Eleventh Vision, I saw a similar phenomenon in politics: The Twelve-Visions President’s first budget was that “solar eclipse” as he eclipsed many of the blinding, solar-high spending programs for the “social good” and most of the non-defense spending. Although Congress did everything possible to undo his budget for their own survival, the unmistakable demonstration of falling taxes and rising buying power still occurred, no matter how diluted. Similar to Einstein’s Relativity, instantly the make-the-people-millionaires program of slashing regulations and offensive government was a world sensation.

With that “solar-eclipse” demonstration, world politics quickly moved beyond career politicians and regulatory bureaucrats...into the new political paradigm, the unprecedented get-the-people-rich government.

Needless to say, the Twelve-Visions President’s Protection-Only Budget was a shock to Congress as he tried to cut the budget in half his first year. He wanted no more deceptions — no more politicians and bureaucrats politicizing our lives and ruling over us in the name of “higher” causes. He knew only the James J. Hills (next chapter) — the geniuses of society — could boost the people’s standards of living. Congress did not accept his budget at all. They did not want to give up their ruling class with all its glory.

Yet, Congress had no choice but to give in to some extent because once the people elected a Twelve-Visions President, they sensed this route to the millionaire phenomenon and stood behind him. So the legislative ruling-class, 435 Congressmen and 100 Senators, had to abandon their first thoughts of impeachment. With their very own constituents cheering for the make-the-people-millionaires program, Congress was not able to completely undo his budget. Of course, Congress radically changed the budget, but the President vigorously pointed his finger at the culprits for the whole country to see. Thus, Congress backed off and some of what he submitted took hold.

Bingo. People's taxes dropped immediately. But more importantly, their buying power started going up almost immediately. For the first time, exciting practical results outperformed political rhetoric. After that "solar-eclipse" demonstration, the Twelve-Visions President then told America, loud and clear: "Imagine what could happen to your buying power if my Protection-Only Budget passed in its entirety. You could all be rich before my term is over!"

With that realization, the people unanimously implemented a nationwide change called The Great Replacement Program: Like a big wave at high tide due to the Solar-Eclipse Budget, the Great Replacement Program washed over the country; it washed away the career politicians and their ruling class. Voters nominated and voted into Congress business owners and genuine, market-driven businessmen and women, knowing they would pass the Twelve-Visions President's Solar-Eclipse, Protection-Only Budget in its entirety.

Those market-driven businesspeople — the James J. Hills (next chapter) — never cared about building political power. Such as the Twelve-Visions President, they were not politicians. Instead, they wanted a free and booming economy. So, to that end, they were more than happy to eclipse their own structures of political power. They were more than happy to eclipse all government "good intentions" — that is, all those social and regulatory programs "for the social good" that were really Trojan Horses carrying massive, suppressive regulations. Those market businesspeople passed the Twelve-Visions President's budget in its entirety. The ruling class vanished.¹

Taxes immediately fell by more than half. But far more important, the regulatory/legislative web throughout the economy simply got swished away, which immediately set free the aggressive entrepreneurs who leapt into Neothink (society's geniuses) and immediately set free the advancing new technologies. The Neothink geniuses — the miracle makers — drove forth the new technologies. Industry after industry went through unprecedented buying-power miracles. Computerlike revolutions were happening everywhere, in every industry, even in the housing industry, bringing us inexpensive beautiful new homes.

Indeed, removing the many regulations on the construction industry and its many suppliers and support industries, not to mention removing the bulk of taxes, immediately allowed general contractors to build bigger, better, and more beautiful homes for a lot less money. And that improvement was immediate, before the technological breakthroughs kicked in!

Under the government of offense, your buying power decreased for a hundred years. After the Great Replacement Program led by a Twelve-Visions President and his Protection-Only Budget, your buying power increased a hundred times or more during your lifetime. Indeed, the Protection-Only Budget quickly freed the geniuses and launched your wealthy Twelve-Visions World. The Prime Law ultimately became an amendment to the Constitution of the United States and permanently freed the geniuses and forever guaranteed your wealthy Twelve-Visions World.

¹Although only one-third of the Senate could have been replaced during the mid-term elections, the public pressure to vote for the Protection-Only Budget would overwhelm the majority of senators.

Everyone Will Be Taken Care Of

Tomorrow's get-the-people-rich government physically protected us only. The Federal Government was reduced to protection against physical aggression (or an imminent threat). A budget less than half previous budgets was needed to protect our country. The other half to three-quarters of previous budgets was no longer needed. We realized up to three-quarters of the Federal Budget had been wrongly used to rule over society through politicizing our lives and our businesses.

The people saw the double negative of money taxed and spent for the “social good”. In fact, the whole idea of a government on the offensive for the “social good” became a bizarre thought. The government had one purpose — a government of defense to protect its citizens from physical attack, coercion, or fraud. All the other money taxed straight out of our lives — up to three dollars for every four that we earned, taken from us in taxes for spending other than physical protection and interest on the debt — simply sucked that enormous portion of money out of the economy, particularly out of those hard-working geniuses who liked to reinvest their money into growth to generate more wealth and jobs. The government then redistributed over half of that money to a government-created class of people who “inherited” a living and generated nothing for society.

But even worse than the huge mandatory spending programs was the discretionary spending to regulatory bureaucracies. They ruled over us with regulations that suppressed geniuses and new technologies. So, the negative effect of a government on the offense was painfully double: big government drained our money out of our lives and then used it to specifically block us from rising into a wealthy paradise on Earth!

The happy, wealthy people in tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World looked through history books while scratching their heads, wondering why we did not see this obvious double negative a lot, lot sooner. We disastrously accepted the deceptions called “the social good”. The destructive ruling class of career politicians and regulatory bureaucrats was well camouflaged as existing for the “social good”.

The Elderly Benefited the Most

What about the elderly and the genuinely needy? Before tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World, the elderly were stuck in the poverty trap caused by the social-welfare illusion. In my Eleventh Vision, the elderly and needy gained the most in the Twelve-Visions World, for they more than anyone needed a monetary metamorphosis in which their savings and pensions suddenly could buy a hundred times more. And that is exactly what they got. Unburdened, free-to-soar technology began driving down costs to fractions immediately after the Solar-Eclipse Budget passed.

Looking back from tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World, when government had regulatory dominance over the economy, prices did not go down. They went up. Inflation was a slow torture for the elderly and the needy on set incomes. Inflation, even slow inflation, eventually trapped many of the elderly and the needy in the dungeons of society as poverty-ridden, dependent “slaves” — “slaves” to big government, forever dependent on their measly entitlement money. That slave class meant guaranteed votes for an ever-increasing regulatory government.

But in the Twelve-Visions World, all that changed. Ironically, that change most benefited the huge American slave class — the elderly and the needy. The make-the-people-millionaires program lifted everyone into financial independence and then financial prosperity.

What about health, education, and everyone’s welfare? What about all those spending programs that got blacked out? The resulting millionaire phenomenon made everyone rich; those previously dependent on entitlements benefited the most. Those previously trapped “slaves”, dependent on suppressive big government in order to survive in poverty, for the first time lived like healthy and wealthy kings as buying power and jobs began multiplying.

Healthy Kings

Now, I said healthy kings because unhampered, soaring technologies not only drove health-care costs to fractions, but eradicated serious diseases. Consider that the FDA, looking out for the “public good”, killed many promising low-cost cures with cost-prohibitive regulations. In my Eleventh Vision, I witnessed that unburdened geniuses of society got the public good done and done quickly. Through the help of unburdened super technologies, the Neothink geniuses quickly, among other things, eradicated diseases (Vision Twelve, later).

Unprecedented Prosperity

I saw the end result of The Great Displacement Program: Government assets and programs not part of protecting its citizens from physical force were sold to the private sector. Geniuses of society, not career politicians, took over programs for the social good to finally achieve social good.

The Great Replacement/Great Displacement Program led by a Twelve-Visions President and his Protection-Only Budget ushered in the new Twelve-Visions Era with no ruling class and no government programs for the “social good”. Super technologies and super entrepreneurs, finally free of political pollution, free of even the smallest regulatory impurities, gave the world an unprecedented power-reactor explosion of prosperity beyond comprehension in today’s terms.

The New Prosperity

The new prosperity made it difficult to look back at the former government programs “for the social good”:

- Education: Among lowest standard of industrialized nations.
- Social Security: A greater and greater strain on the economy.
- Welfare: Left the poor in deeper and deeper poverty traps. Stressing the economy.
- Health Care: Less and less effective.
- Social Programs: Deteriorating results.
- Regulatory Programs: Handicapped America in global competition while driving up costs, suppressing progress, and shrinking our job base...all while arming more and more teams of bureaucrats with guns and legislative-like power.

In the Twelve-Visions World, the above programs “for the social good” fell out of the hands of a few hundred politically driven politicians and bureaucrats...into the hands of millions of sharp geniuses who finally did those programs right.

The Eleventh Vision answered my own two questions:

- 1) How will people take care of their parents with no more government aid and medicare?
- 2) How will people educate their children with no more public schools?

First of all, the Great Displacement Program and the sale of trillions of dollars of government assets to private businesses easily repaid Social Security with full, fair-market interest . A lot of people suddenly got back small fortunes, especially the elderly who spent their lives paying the taxes that paid for those government assets sold. That sale of government assets ended the flawed Social Security era with everyone being repaid his or her money with interest. Working people no longer poured their money down the Social Security drain; most adults received a big check from the Federal Government, and retirees suddenly got back a small fortune.

We discovered — even those on entitlements discovered — that social-welfare programs of all kinds, including the medicare and medicaid programs, were clever illusions that hurt, not helped, the elderly and needy. Those social-welfare programs let the government regulate our economy and politicize our health, blocking computerlike revolutions and free-falling prices for breakthrough cures. Tomorrow, we rescued our parents by freeing the economy and medical industry from those regulatory webs. Soon, health and living costs fell to fractions. Quality of life soared. The Twelve-Visions President's "solar eclipse" demonstration during his first year in office led to the inevitable millionaire phenomenon that made everyone wealthy and healthy, including the poor and the elderly.

Now, for our children: In the Eleventh Vision, I witnessed superior private education become the affordable norm and not the unaffordable exception. Today, only the privileged can, in a sense, pay twice for their children's education — once to the government (via taxes) and once to a private school. But tomorrow, everyone paid only once, but for superior private education.

Private schools became very inexpensive as open competition delivered the highest value for the lowest cost once the government's monopoly on education ended. Our children grew increasingly knowledgeable, creative, and motivated. They grew up to become successful, happy, and rich value creators. Part Four goes into details. (My Neothink trilogy Superpuzzle provides a complete picture of tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World, including the political and educational structure and results.)

Money Talks, Abuse Walks

During this Eleventh Vision into the Twelve-Visions World, I noticed that the Solar-Eclipse Budget — blocking out the blinding, solar-high spending programs, ending the nearly three out of four dollars spent on entitlement programs and regulatory bureaucracies, on politicizing our lives and ruling over us...collecting only the money needed to protect us — did something else besides set free super entrepreneurs and super technologies that made ordinary people rich. The Solar-Eclipse/Protection-Only Budget also eliminated powerful forces of big government that were steadily taking away our freedom and individual rights.

Once the Protection-Only Budget passed in its entirety in the Twelve-Visions President's third year in office after the mid-term Great Replacement Program, no more money was available to go to regulatory bureaucracies, all of which had quietly armed their agents over the decades — a dangerous step in America toward secret police and fascism. Those armed armies of bureaucrats ultimately answered to our President as part of his growing structure of power and ego.

The people in the Twelve-Visions World simply asked: why should any regulatory bureaucrat be armed? If he confronts a potentially hostile situation, then he should call the local police as any other citizen.

For the previous century, however, the government had been quietly building armies of armed bureaucrats. The IRS, FTC, FDA, EPA, SEC, DEA, FBI, INS, ATF, CIA — every regulatory bureaucracy and beyond had armed agents... even the postal service came complete with armed bureaucrats! As the people in my Eleventh Vision looked back, they were amazed at how obvious this abuse of power was, which before went right over their heads.

Those armies of armed bureaucrats, all under the command of the President, grew increasingly aggressive while steadily subtracting our freedom and individual rights. Caught up in the illusions of “social good”, we let them rule over us.

The Protection-Only Budget, once in full force with the success of the Great Replacement Program, simply cut off the funds to those growing armies of fascism. The Protection-Only Budget, simply put, just said no!

So, while making everyone rich, the Protection-Only Budget saved us from deteriorating freedom and growing government abuse.

Jobs, Wealth, Security

Once in office, the Twelve-Visions President’s fiscal policy was simple: eliminate from the annual budget up to three of four dollars previously spent.

Looking back over the twentieth century, America got in trouble regarding the currency. In 1933, Franklin D. Roosevelt took us off the gold standard. With no more accountability or disciplines, the government pumped more and more money into our economy. That caused inflation to eat up our parents’ retirement savings and pensions, leaving them poor and financially dependent on us and the government.

Pumping unbacked currency into the economy had a short-term stimulating effect on the economy, but a long-term deadly effect. Of course, politicians sold out our futures for short-term re-election gimmicks. The people in tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World were amazed, looking back, that fiscal policy had become an exclusive power-and-ego manipulating game for the powers that be. The ordinary working man was the victim. ...After decades of unbacked currency pumped into the economy — forever followed by inflation and increasing poverty for each new generation of elderly and needy Americans — what did we do? In my Eleventh Vision, here was the Twelve-Visions President’s course of action — a one, two punch:

One: He eliminated spending programs for the “social good” and steadily paid off the debt. That cut our taxes in half or more and cut out any need to print more money.

Two: The Twelve-Visions President eliminated corporate income taxes altogether (which accounted for less than one-tenth of the Federal Government’s revenues). That caused an explosion of business, employment, opportunities, and rising incomes for the people as companies reinvested large sums of money back into their businesses, including cash incentives for employee performance. The money that normally went toward taxes and the “social good” instead went toward expansion, job creation, and employee incentive. The economy boomed. ...This concept was first demonstrated in the early ’60s during John F. Kennedy’s presidency and reinforced in the ’80s during Ronald W. Reagan’s presidency.

In the Twelve-Visions World, students shook their heads in disbelief at the illusions used by big government that tricked their parents and grandparents into sending a major portion of our wealth down the drain disguised as the “social good”.

In the Twelve-Visions World, with no more government programs for the “social good”, our taxes a fraction of what they once were, and with no more corporate income taxes, the money once flushed away to the “social good” was now reinvested into economic growth. That same money went instead toward starting and expanding businesses, creating jobs, motivating us as in-house entrepreneurs (Fifth and Sixth Visions), and causing dynamic technological growth... which, like the computers, drove up our buying power a hundred times.

The Twelve-Visions World — Technology, Wealth, and Health

Let me sum up my Eleventh Vision: The freed geniuses of society whom I saw in my Tenth Vision (next) mixed with the freed twenty-first-century super technologies that I saw in my Eleventh Vision. First the impurities of society were removed — the career politicians and regulatory bureaucrats ruling over our money, morals, and businesses in the name of the “social good” instead of properly protecting us. Then the super entrepreneurs and super technologies went through a catalytic, “power-reactor” explosion that lifted society into a beautiful new world, the Twelve-Visions World. In that new world, the people including the poor lived like millionaires.

Here were our steps into that new world: America’s growing damnation of politicians ushered in a nonpolitician Twelve-Visions President sometime in the first quarter of the twenty-first century. His “solar-eclipse” demonstration quickly brought about the Great Replacement Program. Then his Solar-Eclipse Budget, his self-defense, Protection-Only Budget, passed in its entirety and eclipsed government on the offense doing the “social good”. Everyone’s taxes fell in half...and then in half again as market businessmen drove down the remaining government expenses for protection by digging into the nitty-gritty details and making them efficient.

As that occurred, geniuses of society rose by the millions and steadily raised our buying power as their breakthrough technologies drove costs toward zero. We became essentially a hundred times wealthier. Furthermore, every day and night felt as safe as living in Disneyland, for people became wealthy without lifting a finger. Committing crime was too much work. Moreover, the government’s sole focus was your protection: national defense on the federal level and police protection on the local level. For the first time, civilization existed in pure freedom.

The Twelve-Visions World is the paradise on Earth in which we were meant to live — a world in which we will be very wealthy with exciting opportunities, even for those who now have little opportunity. In my Eleventh Vision, that Twelve-Visions World provided ever-better technology for ever-cheaper prices, no longer the sole possession of the computer industry. Major health breakthroughs and cures occurred at increasing frequency and became affordable to everyone, even to the elderly.

Unsurpassed, quality education became available and affordable to all families. Fears of unemployment were forgotten in the perpetually soaring economy with endless selections of living jobs (Fifth Vision). And finally, the millionaire’s life of exotic vacations and first-class luxuries removed every last drop of boredom from our lives. Life was fun and exciting.

Looking back left a heavy sadness in our hearts for the millions who died unnecessarily to disease. We realized how career politicians and regulatory bureaucrats cost many of our loved ones’ precious lives.

Big government was on the offense politicizing our lives and ruling over us. By contrast, the Twelve-Visions World’s get-the-people-disease-free-and-rich government was only on the defense protecting our lives from any physical threat or attack. After depoliticizing society, thus setting free the geniuses of society, then super rapidly evolving new technologies eradicated infectious disease after disease.

As you might suspect, political leaders resisted the idea of depoliticizing America. But, as Victor Hugo once wrote, “An invasion of armies can be resisted, but not an idea whose time has come.”

The Twelve-Visions World is the world everyone wants to live in, but has no clue of. Once enough people got exposure to the prosperity and love available in that previously unknown world — once fifty-million people saw the Twelve Visions — the following four steps swiftly occurred:

- 1) A politically free Twelve-Visions President was elected, vowing to enable the people, including the poor, to live like healthy millionaires by depoliticizing America.
- 2) The Protection-Only Budget was submitted to eliminate government on the offense. Congress rejected most of the budget, but business owners and potential entrepreneurs could now sense the coming new code of freedom. Suddenly private funds for researching new technologies multiplied in all industries. The Technological Revolution shifted into a higher gear; prices began to fall, demonstrating the potential Protection-Only Budget’s mighty effects on the people’s wealth and health.
- 3) The Great Replacement Program washed over the country in the subsequent midterm election like a big wave, washing away most career politicians. Original business owners and other market-driven businessmen and women replaced career politicians nearly unanimously. For, the voting public knew that market-driven businesspeople would pass the Protection-Only Budget without hesitation. Indeed, the Protection-Only Budget passed in its entirety.
- 4) The Great Displacement Program naturally followed as the government’s spending monopolies vanished; private businesses and entrepreneurs moved in to legitimately serve the people. America quickly became a wonderful place to be! Buying power multiplied a hundred times. Ordinary people began living like millionaires. Medical technology jumped into the lead against every disease.

Those make-the-people-millionaires and make-the-people-disease-free phenomena quickly brought three outstanding benefits to us:

- 1) Near-perfect health to us and our loved ones as medical technology raced forward and eradicated disease after disease.
- 2) Millionaire wealth as technologies raced forward in every industry like today’s nonpoliticized computer/information industry, driving prices toward zero and standards of living toward millionaire wealth.
- 3) Supermen and superwomen selves as businesses, in that rapidly advancing Twelve-Visions World, evolved beyond their routine-rut jobs and instead brought out every worker’s potential (Fifth and Sixth Visions). Our stagnant routine ruts were left behind as we discovered our human potential and achieved dreams we could never even fathom before (Ninth Vision). Boredom and stagnation vanished from our lives. Exhilaration and stimulation replaced boredom and stagnation. The job revolution (described in the Fifth and Sixth Visions) poured a hundred-million geniuses into society. Our jobs became our transmission belts to Neothink. Such creative energy rushing into society lifted our nation’s wealth beyond all economic theories or models prior to the success of the Twelve Visions Party. We lived in a wonderful new world never before known to man.

Forbidden Chapter Seven

The Geniuses of Society Bring You Everything You Ever Wanted

“Another sign of a healthy, competitive industry is lower prices. The statistics show that the cost of computing has decreased ten million fold since 1971. That’s the equivalent of getting a Boeing 747 for the price of a pizza.”

— Bill Gates

Stepping through the doorway into the Twelve-Visions Era in my mind’s eye, our geniuses made us rich, made us healthy, made everything good for us. The geniuses of society, who first evolved into Neothink, led the Technological Revolution that raised our standards of living towards that of millionaires. We loved our geniuses; they brought us the gifts of life.

At first, in the late twentieth century, the geniuses freely rose in the computer world and brought ordinary children inexpensive video games that, just a few years before, only the children of millionaires could enjoy. My Tenth Vision showed me that sometime in the first quarter of the twenty-first century, the geniuses freely rose throughout the rest of the business world and brought us inexpensive products that a few years before only the millionaires could enjoy. Indeed, this computerlike millionaire phenomenon came to more and more industries beyond the computer industry, making ordinary people such as you and me essentially millionaires without lifting a finger.

Looking back over the twentieth-century, the millionaire phenomenon had already happened in the computer industry because it was uniquely free of big-government regulations. The computer industry gave us a look ahead at what life would be like in tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World.

My Tenth Vision showed me that, to the amazement of the people, the millionaire phenomenon came to more and more industries as we universally removed big-government regulations. After our get-the-people-rich government removed most big-government regulations, technologies in all industries raced ahead like the computers. As in the computer industry, where buying power multiplied thousands or millions of times, our buying power in more and more industries multiplied hundreds, sometimes thousands of times or more. That was because the geniuses were now free to rise and evolve.

Freeing The Geniuses

Simply put, America’s falling out with big government freed the potential geniuses of society to drive our costs toward zero and our buying power towards infinity. Fantastic products and services never before imagined quickly evolved and then became cheap and affordable. What happened in the computer/communication world was a harbinger of what happened in my Neothink Vision of tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World. When our government freed technology and the geniuses beyond the computers, we lived in increasing wealth and luxury. People became economically driven to end big government and to embrace get-the-people-rich government.

The Twelve Visions Party ushered in get-the-people-rich- including-the-poor government, a completely new political paradigm of entrepreneurs and market-driven business leaders in which your every need, no matter how extraordinary or how small, was taken care of. You and your problems were never alone; help was always on the way for every need.

To achieve that never-alone, always-taken-care-of state, the get-the-people-rich government shifted the responsibility of taking care of you — i.e., social well-being — from a few hundred phony career politicians interested in ruling over you...to a hundred million geniuses in entrepreneurial jobs (the Fifth Vision) with rapidly evolving creativity, very interested in taking care of all your needs and wishes.

Millions of unrestricted geniuses, aggressively seeking out our needs, very rapidly answered our every cry for help. That was the new code of living in tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World. Even your slightest problem had you immediately surrounded by quality people, by geniuses of society, wanting to help you. Just one cry for help sent out from your home over the Internet, for instance, ever so quickly led to its cure.

The job of looking out for your well-being and the social good shifted from impotent government and its corrupt ruling class to the miraculous might of an unrestricted genius-driven society. The unleashed creativity and new technology made us wealthy, healthy, safe and solved our problems. Your problems were the geniuses' problems to solve. In short, geniuses were hard at work taking care of you and raising your standard of living.

Today, big-government career politicians do not care about your problems, no matter how real, unless your problems fall into their self-aggrandizing schemes to rule. That is the old code of living soon to be left behind. All good people now have to fight for their survival. If you contract a rare disease, you are doomed. In tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World, however, unhampered geniuses using Neothink developed a cure before the disease destroyed you. I saw it all in my Tenth Vision. Tomorrow, you were always safe. Looking back at today's world, if you are not happy with your job and pay or with the direction of your career and income, you are trapped. In tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World, genius-driven businesses brought you exciting opportunities including the lucrative career of your dreams (Vision Five), namely your passion in life (Vision One). Today if you are poor or just not happy with your wealth, you are rather helpless. Tomorrow, the multiplying wealth of society rescued your plight. Today, if you are not happy with love, you grow more and more apathetic. Tomorrow, the happiness available from living the life you were meant to live (Vision Two) helped you activate a new, superlove (Vision Seven). If you felt lonely, the enhanced networking of society brought you quality friends, especially as your own value to the world soared (Vision Nine). If you were having hard times, the curing nature of society took care of you in every way.

Geniuses were there for you, in minutes. Money was no longer an issue. A hundred million geniuses in this country alone took care of your every need.

They Brought Us Fortunes

The Twelve Visions Party simply freed the geniuses of society, who became the first to evolve into Neothink. We sat back and collected the rewards from society's most gifted people. It was a nice exchange: we gave them freedom, and they gave us fortunes. We certainly were at a unique place in history.

In the late twentieth century when conversations at cocktail parties developed about computers and the Internet and how we could access for free computing power that would have cost millions a few years before, usually some attractive yuppie said something like, "Can you believe that amazing technology!" Everyone then shared looks of astonishment. Little did we stop to realize that the geniuses of society brought us that soaring technology and buying power. And those geniuses would do so in every industry if free to do so...making ordinary people rich and healthy.

Sometime in the first quarter of the twenty-first century, after fifty million people were exposed to the Twelve Visions, ordinary people began to admire and love those geniuses who brought them new technologies at lower and lower prices. The love grew despite political rhetoric that traditionally caused Americans to envy and dislike the geniuses of society. As the geniuses improved everyone's life in so many ways, the ordinary person developed a warm fondness for the geniuses of society not unlike one would for a highly competent doctor who saved his child's life, for instance.

Indeed, imagine if your own child or grandchild were terminally ill and the heroic efforts of a highly competent doctor saved your child. You would forever feel a warm affection for that doctor who saved your child's life. Or imagine a wealthy person gave you and your family a cashier's check for a million dollars. You would forever feel a very warm closeness to that person who made your life so rich and wonderful.

Tomorrow, the people felt similar feelings towards the geniuses of society, for those geniuses eradicated diseases and lifted us into a wealthy and wonderful world. The hoodwinking by the media that made us envy and dislike the geniuses of society subsided. The forces of Neothink were now too great to be stopped. Sure the geniuses were rich, because they were geniuses! But they made us rich, too. Furthermore, they brought us the gifts of life: wealth, health, safety, even happiness and love. The entire population, sometime in the first quarter of the twenty-first century, felt a warm closeness to those geniuses who brought us and our families into an increasingly wealthy and wonderful life.

We also felt growing contempt toward those big-government career politicians who blocked the geniuses and their new technologies. Career politicians blocked the gifts and the wonderful lives we were meant to live. Once the people made the twelve-piece connections and felt love for the geniuses of society, then the Twelve-Visions Era irreversibly took off.

We sat back and watched in awe as the geniuses of society took care of our needs, fixed our problems, made our dreams come true, and made us rich, including the poor.

Of course, career politicians would not let go of their ruling power as we entered the Twelve-Visions Era. They hung on, but they were part of the old world on its way out (Vision Prologue). We, in turn, freed the geniuses of society whose life ambitions were to solve any and all of our problems and needs, large or small. With the success of the Twelve Visions Party came The Great Replacement Program (Eleventh Vision). Like an unstoppable wave, the voting public replaced career politicians with the market-driven businesspeople of the Twelve Visions Party.

Across the country, then the world, the big wave washed away career politicians and replaced them with the entrepreneurs and market-driven businesspeople of the Twelve Visions Party.

Example of a Genius Evolving Into Neothink

Just how effective were those geniuses of society at taking care of our every need or problem? Instead of me impossibly trying to describe what I saw in my Tenth Vision, which overwhelmed me to the point of euphoric collapse, let me take you into the life and times of an obscure genius of society who already lived. That way, I can show you already proven facts. Now, since some people say the computer revolution was unique — an anomaly based on the invention of the silicon chip — let us go outside the computer industry. In fact, let us go back in time before high technology altogether to see the universal life-lifting power of the geniuses of society on their own, even before their catalytic reaction with modern technologies. So, let us now travel back a hundred years...to the down and dirty railroad industry:

This is a story about James J. Hill, a genius of society one hundred years ago. He was well on his way to multiplying standards of living of entire civilizations of ordinary people — including the poor. He was single-handedly taking care of their every need until he got held down by big-government regulations. His story represents all geniuses of society, even outside the computer and hi-tech industries.

He was a railroad pioneer back at the turn of the twentieth century, and his story is brought to light in a book called Entrepreneurs Versus The State by Burton Folsom.

Let's travel back in time to the 1860s. America was experiencing its first railroad boom. Railroads were being built all up and down the East Coast. Well, as Mr. Folsom identifies in his book, two classes of entrepreneurs exist: market entrepreneurs and political entrepreneurs. Political entrepreneurs make their money by seeking government subsidies, by getting special government rights of way, and by accessing political clout. They seek their success through political clout with government officials.

Market entrepreneurs make their money by providing more and more values and services to society at lower and lower prices. They also create more and more jobs for us.

During America's railroad building boom in the 1860s, an opportunity arose for big government. The political entrepreneurs seeking easy money got together with career politicians seeking popularity, and together they created a deception. The deception was that only the government could finance the building of America's first transcontinental railroad. That deception over 100 years ago is still promoted today; children read about it in their history text books in school.

But that was a deception created by political entrepreneurs so they could line their pockets with lavish government subsidies and by career politicians so they could boost their self-worth by spending money that they controlled but did not earn. They could parade around and say, "Look how important we are. Look how we benefit the American public. We, the big government, are building this transcontinental railroad and opening up the interior and west coast of America." ...A perfect setup for greedy political entrepreneurs joining hands with power-seeking politicians.

So a deception was created: only the federal government could finance the building of the transcontinental railroad. The public bought it, and with great fanfare, Congress went ahead with it.

There were two companies: Central Pacific started building eastward from the West Coast and the Union Pacific started westward from the East Coast. The government paid those companies by the total miles of track they built. So what did they do? Instead of being bound by the disciplines of a bottom line, they were getting lavish subsidies from the government for the total miles of track they built. So they rushed into the wilderness to collect government subsidies.

But because they were being paid by the mile, these companies purposely built the longest, most circuitous routes they could possibly justify so they could get more government money. And they rushed construction to collect their per-mile subsidies. They rushed into the wilderness with poor construction and poor planning.

Remember, the congressmen were spending money that they did not earn but controlled, and they wanted to reap the glory for spending that money. Those politicians, always trying to justify their jobs, always trying to show that they benefit the American public, got into the railroad business where they had no business being in the first place. Controlling tremendous amounts of money they did not earn, they reaped all this popularity that comes with spending the money. Now they could say, "Look how valuable we are; we're financing the building of a transcontinental railroad across America!"

But those career politicians were part of bogus big government. They gladly spent money with their flashy "good intentions", but they were not interested in exerting the nitty-gritty effort that honest business does when it spends money. They were glad to spend the money, large amounts of money. They were glad to reap the glory, large amounts of glory. But they were not about to get out there and exert the nitty-gritty effort to put controls on spending and to make sure that money was spent right. They were not about to get right down into the details themselves to make sure that they were buying the right quality goods at the right prices and that the railroad was being built over the right routes...not like a market businessman would who is spending that money out of his own pocket.

So the whole program was laced with fraud from the beginning. The line managers set up their own supplier companies selling their railroads substandard quality rails and ties at exorbitant prices. For, there was no control over the government money.

In addition, because they were getting paid by the amount of rail they built, each company was racing to build as much track as it could before the other one...to get the most money from the government. So instead of taking the proper time to carefully map out the best routes, especially vital for building over hills at the lowest uphill grade, they instead just raced forward and paid no attention to vital planning and surveying. No time to be wasted on planning and surveying, they built track over uphill grades that were far too steep. They did not take the necessary time to do anything right. When winter came, they just kept on building over the plains, right over the ice!

Because they wanted to build as much as possible, they did not wait for the ice to melt — they just kept on laying track. When summer came, they had to tear up thousands of miles of track and rebuild it, before they could open the line! And to get more money, the two railroad companies built the longest routes with under-quality material. ...You can just imagine what the future operating costs this transcontinental railroad would endure.

Indeed, when the Union Pacific was complete, from day one it could not make a profit because its operating expenses were too high. First of all, thousands of miles of shoddily built, under-quality track had to be constantly replaced. Second, because they took the extra long route, and it wasn't built over the lowest-grade hills, they had to pay a lot more money in fuel costs, wage costs, and it took a lot more time to haul freight across the country. The operating expenses were so high, from day one the Union Pacific was never able to make a profit.

Therefore, the government had to continue to subsidize the transcontinental line once it was built. Union Pacific had to continue to receive more and more government money or it would have gone out of business and stopped running. Indeed, Congress had just spent a fortune financing the building of the transcontinental line. Now Congress could not let their prize transcontinental line declare bankruptcy and close down. So, the government continued financing it.

After the Union Pacific was built, other political entrepreneurs got together with glory-seeking politicians in their areas of the country and said, "The federal government financed the Union Pacific, therefore they have to finance a transcontinental railroad in our region."

So Congress went ahead and financed the building of a transcontinental up North called the Northern Pacific, and one down South called the Santa Fe. Of course, both of those had the same results. They built extra long, circuitous routes; they turned into an orgy of fraud: substandard quality material used, inflated prices paid, no planning, no surveying, no time taken to select the lowest-grade hills. So right from day one, the other two transcontinentals lost money, and they had to receive government subsidies just to continue operating.

In the meantime, there was a young man way up North, James J. Hill, going about making a living. He was born in a log cabin in Ontario, Canada to a working-class family. His father died when he was a boy, so Hill got a job to support his mother. At seventeen, he moved to St. Paul and got a job for a shipping company. He started in an entry-level position, but he loved the transportation business. He really applied himself; he began making contacts, and he began moving up. Before long, he began making partnerships in local railroads that were being built in his area. With a sweeping vision, yet always focussed on nitty-gritty details, Hill commanded success. Eventually, Hill decided that he was going to build the first privately financed transcontinental railroad way up along the U.S. and Canadian border, which at that time was all wilderness with no settlers!

Well, from the beginning the idea was labeled Hill's Folly, and you can see why. How could someone build a railroad that could possibly compete when he had to pay all the building costs himself, and there were three other transcontinental railroads farther South that had all their building costs paid by the government? Moreover, Hill's railroad was going to be way up North where no one lived. Those other three government-financed railroads were located in the main population areas of the United States. In addition, once Hill did complete his railroad, how could he compete with the other three railroads when they continued to receive government subsidies and Hill had to pay his expenses through his own bottom-line profits — and the three other lines proved that no profits existed!

Well, Hill went ahead with his plan anyway. He had to obey the disciplines of a bottom line. He could not go rushing into the wilderness to collect government subsidies. He had to build his line out West one extension at a time. He would build westward into the wilderness a few hundred miles at a time. Then he would send agents back East to advertise to farmers in the East. Hill offered to move people for free into this western wilderness so they could settle and start their farms. Then Hill would give them free rates to ship their crops back to the markets in the East for a couple of years until they got established. He gave a lot of ordinary low-income people exciting new leases on life and made their dreams come true.

This worked. For each extension West, he brought in enthusiastic hardworking farmers; they'd flourish; he'd build up business on his track, and after awhile his extension West made money. From those profits, he'd finance another extension West...a few hundred miles at a time. He never stopped. By turning low-income settlers into land-owning entrepreneurs, among others, he settled the entire northern border of the United States with his railroad. And, lo and behold, in 1890 the first American transcontinental railroad was built without one penny of government money! He reached the Pacific Ocean, and he did it by offering people, some of whom had little chance at much in life, an opportunity of a lifetime to own land and become entrepreneurs.

What an accomplishment. But most amazingly, one man did it! Not the entire might of the U.S. Government — one lone man! One genius of society was raising the prosperity of an entire nation! But, now that he accomplished this amazing feat, could he make it work? Here Hill was with his transcontinental, way up North when the population base was farther South; he was competing against three transcontinentals farther South that had their expenses paid for by the government. So, what would happen to Hill's transcontinental?

During the building of Hill's railroad, since it was his personal money that was being spent, he personally dug into the tough nitty-gritty details. With unyielding disciplines and efforts, he put controls on everything: He personally surveyed the routes; he made sure the shortest, most direct routes were built. When the track had to go over hills, he would spend time with the engineers and make sure they picked out the lowest-grade hills. He personally supervised the buying of materials to make sure they got the highest quality rails and ties for the lowest cost. ... So what happened to Hill's Folly? Well, from day one, when it was completed, he made a profit! He ran circles around the three government-financed lines because his operating expenses were so much lower. In addition, his freight took a lot less time to reach the West Coast. From day one, Hill made money. From day one, the government-subsidized transcontinental railroads never, ever turned a profit.

One man was running circles around the almighty U.S. Government! Of course, the incompetence and greed of career politicians could never bring values to the people. But one market entrepreneur could raise the standard of living of a nation.

This one market entrepreneur's advantages kept building momentum and, with a great irony, left Congress's follies in the dust. Hill built up the whole industry of the Northwest. He built feeder lines. For example, if copper were found a hundred miles north, he would build a feeder line, move in a copper company so they could start mining and shipping the copper over his line. If lumber were discovered up in the mountain, he would feeder line up there, move in a lumber company, and they would start shipping the lumber over his lines. If there was a good clearing for cattle ranching a few miles south, he would build a feeder line. ...Railroads discovered that feeder lines became a main source of profit.

But consider Congress's lines built for politicians' own glory and self-worth. Because those railroads were receiving their money from the government, they would have to get Congress's permission to build a feeder line. Well, of course, everyone knows what happens when the government has to make a decision. A simple black-and-white decision to build a profitable feeder line that should be made overnight would be tied up for months, even for years. All the incompetent congressmen would get up and debate over it to get in the spotlight and appear needed and important. ...They cared only about themselves, not about what was best for America.

So Hill's railroad ran circles around the three government-financed railroads from day one. In addition, Hill brought civilization and industry to the Northwest: mining in Montana, lumber along the North, apple farmers in Washington, wheat farmers on the plains. He built up the whole region along his railroad line.

Once Hill completed his line to the West Coast, he did not stop there. He kept reaching out and pushing up standards of living. Integrating more and more widely, into Neothink itself, Hill started reaching out toward the Orient. What about trade with the Orient? Hill did some calculations: if one major province in China substituted an ounce of rice a day with an ounce of American wheat, that would mean 50 million bushels of American wheat would travel over his railroad to China every year! Think what that would do for his farmers! Now, he would make them rich! American farmers exporting huge shipments of wheat to China — what a possibility! So Hill sent agents to Japan and China to begin promoting American trade, the same way he had done during the building up of his transcontinental railroad.

In the meantime, we had these political entrepreneurs in Washington, D.C. still running around wondering how to get more government subsidies to line their pockets. Yet one market entrepreneur was creating jobs and dreams by the thousands. Indeed, Hill sent his agents to Japan and China to start promoting American products, and he went out and bought his own steamship line. He raced his ships back and forth between Japan and China and America. Hill built up American trade with Asia the same way that he built up business along his line. He would send products for free to the Japanese and Chinese if they would just try them. If they liked them, they would come back for more, and Hill would build up the business.

Every day Hill filled his ships with American grain from the plains, with copper from Montana, lumber from Washington, cotton from the South, textiles from New England, rails from Pittsburgh, apples from Washington. He would send them all free to the Far East. The Asians would try these American goods, and if they liked them, then they would come back for more.

In fact, Hill went to Japan, met with Japanese businessmen, and proposed that he would buy southern cotton, pay for it himself, ship it to the Japanese for free, and give it to them free. Hill would buy the southern cotton out of his own money if the Japanese would just try this cotton in place of the cotton they normally got from India. Well, the Japanese took him up on his offer; they liked it, and soon Hill's box cars were full of cotton, travelling from the South to the North to the Pacific Coast and then on to a steamship to Japan.

Hill used this strategy to build up all kinds of business. In 1900, Japan started a railroad building boom. Hill recognized the potential of railroads throughout Asia. At that time, the world's suppliers of rail were England and Belgium. But there were a few American rail makers in Pittsburgh. So Hill went to Japan; he purposely underbid the English and the Belgians, paid the difference out of his own pocket just to get the Japanese to try rails made in Pittsburgh. His strategy worked: Japan started buying all their rail from Pittsburgh, which built up the fledgling rail industry in America.

What happened in the 1890s was nothing short of a miracle: When Hill started his push into Asia, trade with Japan was seven million dollars a year. Nine years later, with Hill in charge of this American mission into Asia, American trade with Japan alone was fifty-two million dollars! And he was now pushing into China as well! Hill was causing geometrical increases in American commerce. He was spearheading, a hundred years ago, an American dominance of trade in Asia. In the meantime the political entrepreneurs, Hill's so-called rivals, were still running around Washington, D.C. trying to figure out how they could get more subsidies. And Hill just kept on reaching out, with Neothink, taking care of people's needs, and pushing up standards of living while spearheading a geometrical increase of American commerce in Asia. That was one hundred years ago.

As time went by, the other three government-financed transcontinentals continued to lose money. The government kept pouring taxpayers' dollars into financing them. The public started getting fed up with this. In addition, as time went by, the frauds committed by the political entrepreneurs started to surface — things like setting up their own companies to sell substandard material at overcharged prices. The American public had to continue to pay subsidies into this hoax just to keep these other three government railroads running. The public finally had enough. So Congress, those eternal glory-seeking politicians, started self-righteously parading the corrupt political entrepreneurs in front of Congress and the nation, forming special-investigation committees.

Well, once again, Congress created a deception: They presented themselves as protectors of the American public. They would nobly project, "Look how great we are; look how needed and important we are; we're going to protect the American public from those greedy and corrupt railroad executives." Yet, the root cause of the problem was Congress itself. Congress was the culprit! Congress spent other people's money in a railroad business where they had no business being in the first place.

So instead of getting up and confessing, "Look, the problem was us. We now realize the problem was us getting into the railroad business in the first place. We had no business in there, so now we're going to get completely out." They could have been honest, but they were not. No, they did not want to say that because that would have exposed bogus big government. Instead, they saw a chance to enhance big government and to increase their own popularity and political power for re-election. They instead self-righteously projected, "Look how we earn our keep. We're protecting the American public." Congress self-righteously started parading those corrupt railroad executives in front of the nation. Congress made the railroad executives solely to blame for the transcontinental fiascoes. And then, to "protect the public", they proposed to form tough regulatory authorities such as the ICC, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and to pass Sherman Antitrust legislation to further get in there and regulate the railroads.

Well, Hill knew what was going on; he knew what the story was here. So Hill moved to Washington, D.C. He set up residence in the country's Capitol. He personally talked to the congressmen. He testified before their special committees. He told them what was going on: the root cause of the problem was big government getting in there where it had no business being in the first place, financing those railroads, spending other people's money on rails. That caused the corruption. Hill gave the example of his railroad. He did not accept one penny of government money while his railroad built up all the industry in the Northwest. And now his line was promoting an explosion of American trade into Asia while the three government-sponsored lines were sinking in corruption.

Now, the congressmen were intelligent men. They were college educated. They knew what Hill was saying. They knew he made perfect sense. They knew his account was the truth, but they did not care because they wanted to justify their own jobs. So they ignored him. They ignored Hill, and they went on to pass the ICC and the Sherman Antitrust legislation, which enabled them to get in and heavily regulate and punish the railroads.

Hill even wrote a book on this whole ordeal and circulated his book to the congressmen, explaining the situation. He presented all the evidence that showed how Congress was doing the wrong thing. But the big-government ruling class ignored Hill because they wanted to advance their own power. The career politicians went ahead and passed the ICC, passed the Sherman Antitrust legislation. And what did that do? Those regulations "for the public good" made it illegal for railroads to make any special deals with customers. They had to charge the same standard rate to all customers. Therefore, the Neothink dynamics Hill used to build up his railroad, to move in people for free, to make their dreams come true, to ship their freight for free or for a low cost until they got established...was now illegal! Those same dynamics that he was now using to spearhead an American dominance of trade in Asia were all now illegal! Hill was a genius of society who was pushing up ordinary, even poor Americans into prosperity — and WHAM! Big-government regulations smashed him down. Hill's drive into Asia was over.

The year after the ICC's legislation passed, America's trade with Japan alone dropped by 40%. Now remember, Hill was spearheading a geometrical increase in trade. Trade with Japan and China was increasing geometrically. Now Congress passed this legislation and, plop, everything dropped 40%.

Hill was forced to sell his steamship lines, he got out of trade completely with Asia, and he was so frustrated, he retired. Suddenly, the miracle was over. He could no longer make ordinary and poor people wealthy and happy.

Now, this was a hundred years ago. Let us stop and look at the implications of this. Let us stretch this out to see what Congress really cut off a hundred years ago. It was bad enough they cut off Hill's trade with Asia back then and destroyed the wealth, lives and dreams of many entrepreneurs dependent on Hill's dynamics, but let us project that into the future to see what they cut off today:

Throughout the past two decades, you have heard our President and top CEOs and top economists say that America's greatest danger economically is its trade imbalance with Asia and our lack of international competitiveness. But who in the world knows that a hundred years ago Hill was spearheading an American dominance of trade throughout all of Asia? That trade dominance was cut off by big-government regulations. Who even knows that? Nobody mentions that today, but everyone has warned about "the greatest economic danger facing America today". Americans have lost jobs by the thousands, have been outcompeted, factories have closed down. Yet who knows that one hundred years ago this one genius of society, one man, learned how to tend to people's needs, make people's dreams come true, and spearhead an American dominance of trade with Asia? Who knows that a hundred years ago a man named James J. Hill started something really magnificent that would have painted an entirely different picture of America's future than that of uncertainty today? Big government destroyed that prosperous future when they destroyed Hill a hundred years ago.

The politicians back then knew what they were doing. They were intelligent men. They were college educated. Hill went and explained the facts to them. Typical of big government, however, they only wanted to increase their political powers. The career politicians wanted to advance their images and egos. So they ignored Hill, and they cut off something magnificent a hundred years ago. No different than today, the ruling class back then stopped our great, great grandparents from rising into a paradise on Earth.

So there you have an example of what just one genius of society can do for everyone. And you can see that the geniuses of society will rise in any industry at any time, not just in the computer or hi-tech industries, if not held down by the big-government regulations. And you can see that, when the geniuses rise tomorrow in all industries, our problems, needs, and dreams will quickly be tended to. In short, the Twelve-Visions Society tomorrow — a supersociety with millions of James J. Hills — will take care of us and make our dreams come true.

Now, imagine a hundred-million geniuses of society (Vision Five), a hundred-million James J. Hills all using Neothink...their progress accelerated by modern technology. You cannot imagine, because the image goes beyond anything we can know today.

Held Down in the Darkness

My Tenth Vision showed me that in tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World, looking back at today's world was very frustrating. We saw how career politicians and bureaucrats ruling over us and holding down society today caused the only injustice that no one could see, because no one today could see ahead into the Twelve-Visions World tomorrow. One obvious example, America would have been the dominant trade of that huge upswing in Asia, but we never had a clue. America's problems with the trade deficit and people losing their jobs to international competition would have all been reversed. But no one saw that. Instead, we were held down in the darkness. Looking back, no one except those who read The Twelve Visions could see the injustice of government ruling over us and holding us down.

James J. Hill started pushing ordinary and poor people up toward that paradise on Earth, but he was slammed back down by big government. Tomorrow, once we lived in the Twelve-Visions World and could see the injustice of former big government, to look back became painfully hard to do. The people in the Twelve-Visions World realized that every life lost on the battlefield, all famine and sufferings in America and around the world in the twentieth century and early twenty-first century, including deaths from diseases...all of that was encompassed in the Great Suppression — the ruling class holding down America from soaring into the Twelve-Visions World.

The Geniuses Pulled Everyone Up With Them

In this Tenth Vision of tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World, the geniuses of society were free to go up, and they pulled everyone up with them, including the poor, just as Hill was doing. All our needs were taken care of. We did not have just one James J. Hill, for we had thousands and then millions of James J. Hills making ordinary people's dreams come true.

Tender youth could rise and rise quickly. Tender youth today, by contrast, cannot rise because they cannot struggle through the big-government regulatory web and risk being eaten alive like Hill.

Unburdened technology in tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World, regulated not by glory-seeking politicians and bureaucrats but by objective private services, advanced incredibly fast. Science, business, and medicine, no longer pushed down by big government, advanced incredibly fast, similar to the nonpoliticized computer industry of the previous two decades.

Upon setting free all industries and launching the mighty Technological Revolution, genius-driven new technologies quickly took care of all our problems. Disease, unemployment, poverty, divorce, obesity, insecurity, stagnation, racism, crime, budget deficits, the national debt, government abuse, Social-Security deficiency, illiteracy vanished along with big government. So did our personal problems such as a lousy job, lousy love-life, an uncompetitive body, a stagnant mind, an embarrassing home, car, and overall financial self-worth.

Consider that in 1936, mankind reached a new high with the completion of Hoover Dam to harness the Colorado River. After thousands of years, man reached a level of technology that could control nature on a large scale. But man took only another 33 years to go to the moon. Civilization was begging to progress geometrically, which occurred in my Tenth Vision sometime in the first quarter of the twenty-first century when the big-government legislative/regulatory web was swished away and super technologies and unrestrained geniuses made us wealthy, healthy, and safe.

Too Painful To Look Back

Some readers of this very page lost their lives to disease or lost a precious loved one. Looking back at our loss was hard. My childhood friend John who, at 12 years old, ran and played with all the other children; but the next year, muscular dystrophy started taking over his tall and handsome body. John first needed crutches, then a wheelchair, then an electric wheelchair...his long, limp body strapped in with a seat belt. In those days, John and I would go around doing things that young men do. John was almost in my world, talking about sports and girls. Yet, John would never experience those things. I could sometimes see in John's eyes his longing to throw off his seat belt, jump out of his wheelchair, and scream, "Here I am world! Here I am!" One day, John got a cold, and just a young man, he died. Yet, geniuses in tomorrow's unrestricted Twelve-Visions Society would efficiently cure his disease.

Looking back, big government held down the lid on America including cures to diseases, but we could not see the harm caused by big government. Tomorrow, it became almost too painful to look back at what and who we lost.

Consider looking back at the following image: Imprisoned by hunger, little children in poverty-stricken third-world countries hoped for a little fish with their rice for dinner. If James J. Hill were not stopped 100 years ago, along with the other market businessmen since Hill, then those poor countries would have been industrialized and prosperous a long time ago.

Instead, those third-world children suffered and died to the bitter end of the twentieth century and into the twenty-first century as the "glorious" big-government "good intentions" flourished and lived. The Great Suppression went on and on.

American children have always felt excitement about their futures. Yet, tomorrow when we looked back we realized that America, the land of opportunity, was also the land of disillusionment and disappointment. The drop from childhood dreams to adulthood reality was a deep letdown. Indeed, American adults carried a subdued sadness every day...to the end. Before the Twelve-Visions World, Americans died unfulfilled, without experiencing wealth, romantic love, the life they were meant to live.

In tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World, looking back became almost unbearable, for we saw what was lost. We failed at our dreams in the twentieth century and early twenty-first century because we were in a society in which we could not win. My Tenth Vision showed me that the Twelve-Visions Society, by contrast, would not let us fail. Instead, it made our dreams come true and made every ordinary person, including the poor, wealthy and healthy.

Looking back, people shook their heads in disbelief. The legal battles, regulations, and legislation made opportunities at success limited, costly, and risky. We glumly looked back at the stagnation that killed our dreams, weakened our marriages, and destroyed the thrill of love we felt only during the first few weeks or months of falling in love. And, most painfully, we saw how our children absorbed from us our hopeless resignation, just as we had from our parents.

The Disgraceful End

In the first quarter of the twenty-first century, with the dissemination of The Twelve Visions, the Great Suppression came to a disgraceful end. Neothink was setting free stagnant minds everywhere. Big government could not continue to hold on and strangle progress and kill our dreams. The success of The Twelve Visions ushered in The Twelve Visions Party.

With the success of The Twelve Visions Party (Vision Eleven), society no longer got pushed down with us being squeezed into stagnation-traps where we had always lived. Career politicians lost. Their big-government regulations and harmful legislation — always in the name of the "social good" — lost. Their bogus purpose for government lost:

Promote social "prosperity" and provide social "well-being" through social and regulatory programs "for the social good"... "good intentions" to "serve the people" (a deception, enforcing what is deemed the "social good", "good intentions", or the "national will"...mere men and women playing God with our money, morals, businesses, and our lives).

With the success of the Twelve Visions Party, the proper purpose for government won:

Physically protect the people from force (or threat of force) with protection-only legislation, police, courts, prisons, and national defense (plain reality, defending against and punishing initiatory force).

Tomorrow we looked back and realized in disgust that, as with the transcontinental railroads, our career politicians spent our money to ostensibly enhance our “well-being” and promote social “prosperity”, but they really wanted the glory and “importance” that went with spending other people’s money and ruling over us. They did not want anything to do with the effort, though, that went into building values, which market businessmen and women put themselves through every day when spending their own money.

Career politicians and regulatory bureaucrats today suppress all industries (the computer industry being the most fortunate, least politicized industry). Career politicians today suppress our entire economy and standard of living as they did a hundred years ago with the railroads. Market businessmen, by contrast, are interested in creating and building values, not in ruling others. They create miracles for the human race, from Hill’s transcontinental railroad to Gates’ computer software and beyond.

The Miracle Makers

Tomorrow, the miracle makers, the unburdened market businessmen and women, dramatically improved our well-being and prosperity. A Twelve-Visions Society, flourishing with geniuses, handed us the gifts of life, especially wealth, health, and safety.

Prior to the Twelve-Visions Society, the erroneous idea in the anticivilization that government could “promote social prosperity” sort of sneaked up over the previous century through career politicians finding ways to self-indulge at spending our money to become more and more likable for re-election. Indeed, spending other people’s money was a fast way to build favorable illusions in the twentieth century and early twenty-first century. But when the people caught on sometime in the first quarter of the twenty-first century, the career politicians’ careers ended with great shame.

In this Tenth Vision, market businessmen and women replaced career politicians. Geniuses of society rose and threw open the lid on society and lifted society toward its destiny of great, great prosperity. Each person was pulled up, our wheelchairs left behind. The whole world was then lifted as the communications revolution obsoleted distance and boundaries.

Paradise On Earth

The Tenth Vision showed me that in the Twelve-Visions World, irrationality disappeared. Poverty and crime vanished. In the Twelve-Visions World, the motivation for people to do dishonest things reversed. In time, in that world of disappearing irrationality, the idea of crime and eventually war became archaic. We achieved paradise on Earth.

Perhaps this all sounds like Utopia. But my Tenth Vision showed me tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World truly reversed the motivation for people to do dishonest things, for most problems disappeared, and a millionaire standard of living was automatic — far easier and more lucrative than any possible crime. With the success of the Twelve Visions Party, the era of wealth and peace was here, finally and forever.

Before the Twelve Visions, the people never knew about this wonderful world. We only dreamed about it when we were children. We needed to “see” it through these Twelve Visions.

Today, we live in a lucky time. Huge financial rewards beckon us to the Twelve Visions Party. Our get-rich era is coming.

Forbidden Chapter Eight

Real Universal Health

“It is not just new viruses that have doctors worried. Perhaps the most ominous prospect of all is a virulent strain of influenza. Every so often, a highly lethal strain emerges. Unlike HIV, flu moves through the air and is highly contagious. The last killer strain showed up in 1918 and claimed 20 million lives — more than all the combat deaths in World War I. And that was before global air travel; the next outbreak could be even more devastating.”

—Time Magazine

By now during my Neothink Visions, the images centered more and more around our health. More than anything else in the twenty-first century, the people cried out for the geniuses, with their groundbreaking technologies, to eradicate virulent diseases.

Devastating new diseases were on the rise and, perhaps even worse, drug-resistant strains of several old killer diseases were back. Those frightening new diseases and new strains tended to break down our acceptance of the FDA that suppressed the rise of Neothink geniuses in the medical industry and held back the rapid advancement of the medical industry. Our physical survival more and more depended on rapid advancement.

My Twelfth Vision showed me that during the early twenty-first century, doctors were less and less able to handle certain infectious diseases that were gaining resistance to antibiotics. A powerful warning came when only a single remaining antibiotic could stop a popular strain of staph infection that commonly spread throughout hospitals. Once that lone remaining antibiotic ceased to work, hospitals would become risky places to visit. Then, the common strep infection gained resistance to antibiotics. My Twelfth Vision warned me of the increasing danger as we advanced into the new millennium. A killer disease, tuberculosis, returned, this time attacking our children, and this time even a combination of antibiotics could not stop it.

In short, infectious diseases caught up with and began to surpass modern medicine in the twenty-first century. The FDA worked against a major medical revolution that was just waiting to explode with greater force than the computer revolution. In fact, the inherent force of a medical/biotech explosion was so great that even with the FDA, genetic engineering such as the Human Genome Project and other biomedical projects were advancing at an all-time pace. But the mighty biomedical explosion could not ignite with the FDA smothering progress. As with computers, the technology needed quick access to the marketplace, which the FDA blocked. Indeed, the marketplace is the oxygen needed to ignite the biomedical explosion, which the FDA smothered.

Here is a brief review of a Time Magazine warning.

Killers All Around
New Viruses and Drug-Resistant Bacteria
Are Reversing
Human Victories Over Infectious Disease
(A Review of Time Magazine Cover Story)

The Time Magazine cover story begins by reminding us how, not long ago, humanity thought that infectious diseases were rapidly becoming a thing of the past. In the 1970s, the medical world started boasting its imminent victory. And why not? Previously deadly illnesses such as polio, small pox, malaria, diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus “seemed like quaint reminders of a bygone era, like Model T Fords or silent movies”. And antibiotics transformed the most terrifying diseases known to mankind such as tuberculosis, syphilis, pneumonia, bacterial meningitis, and even bubonic plague into “mere inconveniences that if caught could be cured with pills or shots”. Medical students were being told not to go into infectious disease, a “declining speciality”. Instead, they were advised to concentrate on “real problems” such as cancer and heart disease.

But, unfortunately, today the era of great medical success and confidence has been giving way to a new era of unnerving medical defeats...and fear. The Time cover story states, “The question ceased to be, When will infectious disease be wiped out? and became, Where will the next deadly new plague break out?” The article goes on to tell us about new lethal agents emerging in Africa and South America. As population grows and man settles new parts of the world, such as a new part of the Brazilian rain forest, for example, new deadly diseases spread from other animals such as monkeys to humans. As those deadly agents adapt to humans, they gain the potential for large-scale deadly pandemics. In a world of extensive air travel, those deadly agents become just a plane ride from America.

And it could get worse, the Time article claims. Antibiotics are our main defense that stand between us and some of the most deadly bacterial diseases. But bacteria have been evolving and steadily adapting for survival, and now they are well adapting to antibiotics. In fact, the article warns us that every disease known to man is already resistant to antibiotics of one form or another. Several devastating diseases once thought to be nearly eradicated are back and on the rise: malaria, cholera, measles, tuberculosis, even bubonic plague. Perhaps even more threatening are the “seemingly prosaic but once deadly infections” staph and strep. They have become much harder to treat. Both spread through the cleanest of hospitals, routinely cured with antibiotics. But as those two infections develop universal resistance, the article questions, what will happen to our hospitals?

“One of medicine’s worst nightmares is the development of a drug-resistant strain of severe invasive strep A,” the article states. Severe, invasive strep A killed Muppeteer Jim Henson in 1990; this vicious killer is on the rise.

Bacteria adapt to antibiotics because, while rapidly multiplying, bacteria mutate and change slightly, just enough to outwit their combatant drugs.

Viruses, on the other hand, are usually tamed and sometimes even eradicated by the preventive vaccine. But the article points out that new viruses keep emerging. Viruses that have gone undetected, inhabiting animal populations, can and sometimes do make the jump to humans. The Time article tells us that was the case with some very lethal African viruses such as Ebola, which made the jump from monkeys to humans.

Still, the biggest fear of all, as explained in that Time Magazine article, would be another killer flu, which usually makes the jump from another animal to humans. Humans have little defense against such a flu, and if it took hold, then it would wreak deadly havoc. The 1997-1998 Hong Kong “chicken flu” introduced such a killer flu that, tragically, killed a few people in Hong Kong but, fortunately, did not take hold and go into a widespread outbreak. Now, each year that avian flu attempts to jump to and spread among humans. When a global outbreak does happen, the world will never be the same.

The Time Magazine article was a warning. Today's biomedical progress is impressive, but is it moving fast enough? The answer is: no, not until the technology has quick access to the marketplace, as do the computers. And that means no regulatory FDA.

The definitive antidote is "begging" to happen now, in the early twenty-first century, to rescue the human race from the threatening plagues. That antidote to the threatening human catastrophes is: super rapidly evolving technologies. Only rapidly evolving new technologies can win the race against rapidly evolving infectious diseases. But those new technologies will not evolve quickly enough until they can swiftly reach the marketplace.

Starting in the late twentieth century, continuing into the twenty-first century, the national media such as Time Magazine repeatedly warned us we were suddenly losing the race against infectious diseases, with mutant strains of old diseases returning after decades of "absence" and new diseases invading us with devastating results. The media warned that a medical defeat to microbes could bring with it human catastrophes such as those experienced in the time of bubonic plague, polio, and killer flus. The Superflu of 1918 infected over one billion people, half the world's population in 1918, and killed over 20 million people in just 10 months. Never in the history of the world had there been so many deaths in such a short period of time. Man has not experienced anything close to that catastrophic pandemic since, but in the early twenty-first century, scientists fear a repeat is not far away.

The 1918 Spanish Flu, as it was often called, actually started right here in the United States and infected 25% of our population. Doctors have warned in the early twenty-first century that logistically "we are due" for another killer strain. In fact, in 1976, we survived a great scare — a false alarm, or perhaps more apropos, a fair warning: A soldier at Fort Dix, New Jersey got the flu and died. The medical world was stunned when the virus taken from the dead soldier was a descendent of the 1918 killer flu. The medical world braced itself for another catastrophe of unthinkable proportions. But the deadly virus that made the jump from birds to humans was an isolated case unable, this time, of passing among humans. This time, we were lucky. Next time...

Only super rapidly advancing new technology can prevent a "next time". The race is on. Every year a handful of people die from avian flu. It is only a matter of time before it will pass freely from human to human. The new technology of genetic engineering has the potential to permanently and universally stop deadly viruses and bacteria. The problem with this promising new technology in the early twenty-first century, however, is that it is not super rapidly advancing, not fast enough...not until the removal of the FDA. Remember, super rapidly advancing new technology demands rapid access to the marketplace. Breakthrough technologies and drugs must freely reach the marketplace. Private regulatory services with risk-rating systems would be in place, but simply put, the way things are now with the FDA, we will lose the race. For a computerlike medical revolution to happen, the FDA will have to come to an end in order to spring loose the geniuses of society and their new technologies.

The following brief review from the same issue of Time Magazine reveals new technologies pursued by doctors, scientists, and businessmen (but again, missing the key ingredient of market-accessible super rapidly advancing new technologies):

Counterattack:

How Drugmakers Are Fighting Back
(A Review of Time Magazine Article)

"Doctors and the public were not alone in feeling cocky about infectious disease a decade ago. The drug companies did too,” so began the article. “More than 100 antibiotics were on the market, and they had most bacterial diseases on the run, if not on the verge of eradication.”

The pharmaceutical industry simply modified existing antibiotics to stay one step ahead of the bacteria. But that approach no longer works. So, researchers are turning to new technologies to get back in the lead against disease.

One dynamic approach is called “rational” drug design. Scientists study the molecular structure of a bacterium, particularly the active site of the enzyme used by the bacterium to fight off the antibiotic. Next, scientists attempt to design a molecule to “plug up” the active site of that enzyme. Without the effect of that enzyme, the bacterium would once again be killed by the original drug.

A similar concept is being pursued against viruses. You see, viruses cause their damage by invading our bodies’ living cells. To invade a living cell involves receptor sites, like little hooks, where the virus joins the cell. Similarly, a molecule can be designed to block the receptor sites so the virus never attaches to our cells thus remains harmless to our bodies. ...So goes the search for such defendant molecules through combinatorial chemistry.

Again, the problem with such new medical technologies is that they are not super rapidly advancing ...not as they should be, not like, say, computer technology. How, then, did our country finally get medical technology to super rapidly advance to prevent the coming human catastrophes? My Twelfth Vision showed me:

The Great Rescue

I witnessed during the Twelfth Vision that the looming medical catastrophes helped us see reality and depoliticize the medical industry. Two things happened at once by depoliticizing medicine: 1) record amounts of private research funds went toward medical research, and 2) a record number of entrepreneurial geniuses went into medical research. Those unhindered geniuses of society drove medical technology into unimaginable new dimensions that eradicated the most complex diseases. In short, the Neothink geniuses drove forth those new technologies to save our lives.

Depoliticizing the medical industry, depoliticizing everything about it from regulations on health insurance to regulations on medical research, saved many tens of millions of lives.

Today, each added increment of politicizing the medical industry further bureaucratizes and slows advancing new medical technology, which in turn dramatically drives away private research funds. Medical projects become too inefficient and cost-prohibitive for businesses to invest. Moreover, the lone entrepreneurs, those aggressive geniuses of society, could never function in such a cost-prohibitive, risky environment. The force of their creativity and endless energy that so propelled the free computer/Internet industry is but a fraction of what it could be in the medical industry. They are needed to unlock the cures to the most complex diseases.

In the Twelfth Vision, those geniuses, once they were free to flourish and leap into Neothink, rapidly unlocked otherwise impossible combinations.

Politicization ravages our health and costs us millions of precious lives. Each incremental step the other way — depoliticizing the medical industry — dramatically frees up thus speeds up advancing technology, which in turn dramatically attracts private research funds and opens up the medical industry to the entrepreneurs and their endless energy and creativity, their speed and ability to ferret out brilliant advances.

In the Twelfth Vision, I witnessed that we outgrew our desire to be ruled over. As people began dying in increasing numbers, at a faster rate than the bio-tech advancements started saving people, we chose to depoliticized the medical industry to make it as free as the computer industry. Survival pressures changed our toleration levels for debilitating big government. Without it, the geniuses did to medicine what they did to computers. Our country won this race against the microbes. In the Twelve-Visions World, after depoliticizing the medical industry, more and more geniuses rose up and saved us from worldwide human catastrophes. That medical revolution became known as the Great Rescue. But the human losses were never forgotten.

Two Forces That Brought Us the Twelve-Visions World

My Twelfth Vision showed me two forces at work: Rising within us, we felt disillusioned with politicians and regulatory bureaucracies. A steady rebellion against a ruling class started spontaneously rising throughout civilizations around the world, from China and the Orient, through Russia and Eastern Europe, Asia Minor and down through Africa, to the relatively free United States and throughout Central and South America. Those early signs of the new Neothink mentality, spontaneously rising throughout different civilizations around the globe, affected us at home.

Tomorrow, we started resisting the ruling class and its politicization over our lives just as we would resist a religious cult trying to tell us how to live. A shrinking number of people tolerated big government legislating and regulating our money, morals, and businesses.

That anti-authority trend gained momentum as medical catastrophes loomed. Under growing survival pressures, the people saw more clearly and ended the ruling class.

There was also another, more specific force at work: the inevitable Twelve Visions Party with the underlying mission to prevent the coming medical catastrophes. The Twelve Visions Party, upon its success, set free the geniuses of society. They brought the Technological Revolution beyond the computer industry to the medical industry and to all American industries — the only antidote to the looming medical and economic catastrophes.

The Twelve Visions Party quickly depoliticized the medical industry and set free the drug companies and especially the aggressive entrepreneurs, the geniuses of society. The Twelve Visions Party represented medical technology versus medical catastrophe...the new world of freed geniuses using Neothink versus the old world of career politicians and bureaucrats suppressing progress. The Twelve Visions Party brought in the new world and unleashed the technologies and geniuses in all industries. When America embraced the Twelve Visions Party, the party for depoliticizing America, then three benefits surfaced:

1. Near-perfect health for the young, the old, and for those in their prime.
2. Millionaire-like wealth for ordinary people, including the poor.
3. Exciting jobs of the mind for nearly everyone, which released nearly everyone's human potential (the Fifth and Sixth Visions).

Young Again

My Twelfth Vision showed me that as the ordinary person got swept into a stimulating life of nearly perfect health and millionaire wealth, he passionately sought life over death. Death at mid-70 simply became unacceptable. Science, medicine, business, and entrepreneurs focused on an epic event: eradicate diseases and illnesses to enable ordinary people to live healthily well into their hundreds, and then beyond.

Technology-blocking “higher authorities” such as the FDA that burdened progress were scorned out of existence by the people.

Today, most people feel the unacceptability of the ultimate disease, aging. But few people can relate to their own greatest tragedy of dying in their 70s because:

- The thought of living healthily and prosperously for 130 years or more seems like science fiction.

- One’s wealth, health, love and happiness are stagnant or shrinking. At 75 years, life is no longer very stimulating, and the desire to live longer in “old age” is gone.

In tomorrow’s rapidly progressing Twelve-Visions World, I saw (in my Twelfth Neothink Vision) that the idea of living longer did not seem so futuristic. What before seemed technologically impossible was in wide use. Without disease, we lived well into our hundreds.

Moreover, the idea of extending human life by slowing the disease of cellular degeneration or aging, and slowing the effects of gravity and entropy, became a mass appeal, especially as ordinary people became wealthy, healthy, and in love with life...the young and romantic life. The geniuses were hard at work learning how to extend our lives!

Today, by contrast, people eventually lose the desire to live. Sinking in stagnation, most good people experience limited financial and emotional success. Physically, emotionally, and financially burned out, most older people do not care to live too much longer. Quality of elderly life is far below what it would be in tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World. Thus, today the desire to live longer is not in wide demand.

In tomorrow’s nonpoliticized wealthy/healthy/exhilarating Twelve-Visions World, I saw people regain a childlike desire to live longer. Rich and in love with life, the desire to live longer was in wide demand.

Death Under 100 Became Unacceptable

A strong sense of tragedy grew in us as we got older and closed in on death. We emotionally grasped the unacceptability of dying in our 70s. In fact, the thought of dying at all, not to mention so young, grew increasingly intolerable. That unacceptability of dying was a direct result of our deep and permanent happiness as value creators (Vision Two). Tomorrow, the freed geniuses of society raced forward to answer our cries for life as we discovered the persons we were meant to be, forever ending the burden of life (Visions One and Two).

Most of us today do not grasp the tragedy of dying so young because, as we grow older, we steadily lose our enthusiasm for life. The burden of life comes to the surface as we use up our happy experiences of life (Vision Two). We cannot blame ourselves, for in today’s suppressed world, life offers limited mortal doses of wealth and happiness.

My Twelfth Vision showed me that tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World actually reversed the trend: enthusiasm actually intensified as we grew older. As Neothink value creators, we built larger and larger puzzles of creation, which became very exhilarating. Instead of withering in our ruts, we blossomed in our creations.

In tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World, our brief seven-and-a-half decades of life was considered much too brief for the wealthy and happy ordinary person. The demand for living longer grew enormous. First, disease was eradicated to give us healthy life well into our hundreds. Then, major businesses, financial institutions, scientists, research doctors and entrepreneurs embraced the growing demand for longer life. Money, minds, technology, science, medicine came together through entrepreneurial business. Their superpuzzle soon pieced together the ultimate demand of slowing down and eventually curing the disease of aging. (See Neothink trilogy Superpuzzle by Mark Hamilton.)

The geniuses awakened the sleeping-giant consumer product of all time: life extension. For suddenly, happy people's brief time in all eternity became unacceptable. Too brief. Within your lifetime, the new Twelve-Visions World doubled your journey through life...and more.

The Life We Were Meant To Live

Tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World saved us from emotional diminishment and lifted us to the next level of happiness. We lived each and every day with four new frontiers of happiness, described in Twelve Visions.

Today's world brings us uneventful years for all we have left...for our one short experience of life in all eternity. In the Twelve-Visions World, by contrast, my Twelfth Vision showed me we were like children with so much yet to experience. As value creators, we had no limits... always another adventure to create and experience. We finally lived the lives human beings were meant to live. Before the Twelve Neothink Visions, we had no clue of that life.

Tomorrow, life was bigger than life again, like when we were children. Every new day filled us with exhilaration. Creating exciting new values was how we played as adults. Yes, play ... like children. We enjoyed the love from our fellow man for creating important values for society. The burden of life was gone. We achieved both the technology and the desire to live a lot, lot longer (Vision Four). We enjoyed nearly perfect physical and mental health for a long, extended life of happiness.

Today, the regulatory and entitlement programs for the "social good" are illusions that politicize our lives and rule over us — over our money, morals, and businesses. The career politicians and regulatory bureaucrats get enormous power, prestige, and they control enormous wealth. On the other hand, we get suppressed with physical diseases, mental stagnation, and short burdensome lives.

Looking forward into the Twelve-Visions World, career politicians and regulatory bureaucrats were left behind. The geniuses jumped ahead into Neothink and brought us enormous buying power and nearly perfect health. Thereafter, we too jumped into Neothink. As described in the full Twelfth Vision (in my book Twelve Visions), four new frontiers of happiness appeared before our eyes and brought us back to our child of the past and a beautiful, long-lost world in which we permanently rediscovered the thrill of life.

Forbidden Chapter Nine

Educating Geniuses

Upon entering first grade at six years of age, the natural motivational drive in the child is gradually lost. You see, the premise of public schools today is: Prepare children to effectively integrate into society. Now, imagine that the eager child dreams about growing up and becoming a famous person who does wonderful things...a great value creator. “I’ll do great things for the world and become a millionaire!” But those dreams gradually dissipate as the child blends into today’s suppressed civilization.

In my Ninth Vision, I witnessed the premise of Twelve-Visions-World schools: Prepare children to create values that many people need and are excited to buy. My Vision showed me that on the child’s first day of school, the teacher would walk in and say, “I’m going to prepare you to create great things for the world, and as a result you will become famous and rich!” Wow, the child sat up and took notice — his dreams confirmed! His motivation grew with compounding momentum as he steadily gained the ability to achieve his dreams throughout his Twelve-Visions-World education.

The Old School

In today’s suppressed civilization, children have little chance to grow up and become rich with a public education. Consider the trend in public schools today concerning the three fundamentals of education. (The three fundamentals of structure, motivation, and thinking as identified by renown educator, Professor Leonard Peikoff):

Structure: Increasing trend toward class discussions, free-flowing thoughts from kids and teachers, random facts about events and dates pragmatically “structured” to bring the child into “what’s happening in today’s social environment”. The child hears all those unintegrated points (i.e., percepts), but later he forgets much of what he saw and heard in school.

Thinking: The child is not taught to integrate. He is not taught to integrate the many random percepts into common denominators — into a few timeless, unforgettable concepts. He never knows the power of his mind to integrate random percepts into structured concepts for everlasting knowledge. Knowledge is power, but he retains little knowledge. Instead, he absorbs then forgets unintegrated, pragmatic percepts, many regarding what’s germane to the politically correct times. When he graduates, his mind is quite impotent as he settles into our suppressed society.

Motivation: He has little certainty, just a go-with-the-flow “education”. The child learns to “fit in”. He is trapped, at the mercy of our society, economy, national standard of living. There is nothing to be motivated over, for the child implicitly feels less and less power to rise above the suppressed state of things, above the burden of life he sees in his parents, to create new values for society and enjoy the emotional and financial rewards as an adult. Dreams become blurry and fade.

The New School

In tomorrow’s Twelve-Visions World, by comparison, dreams not only came true for schoolchildren and for adults, too, but those initial dreams were just the beginning. I saw it all in my Ninth Vision:

Structure: Twelve-Visions-World schools had a highly ordered presentation of knowledge, via class lectures, starting with bare percepts and integrating those many percepts by common denominators into a few timeless concepts for rapid absorption and permanent retention of knowledge. Knowledge was power. Through building timeless concepts, the child retained all that he learned in school. Moreover, he observed and learned how to integrate to build, piece by piece, onto his base of concepts — to build more and more knowledge and power throughout his life in order to someday create great values for society.

Thinking: The child was taught to integrate. He discovered why his mind was infinitely superior to all other animals. He integrated knowledge through common denominators from random percepts into structured concepts. He learned to form a few large concepts, not memorize many specific percepts. Thus, that child retained magnitudes more knowledge through integrated thinking. Soon, he learned how to snap a few of those concepts together into simple puzzles. Integrated, puzzle-building thinking sent thrills through the child, and it would eventually take him to great heights. The child quickly rose beyond the reach of all stagnation traps. Instead of heading toward a routine rut, he was heading toward exhilarating value creation.

Motivation: The child knew with certainty that he could make a difference, for knowledge was power. The child felt certainty and power. He naturally became motivated for more, for superchild would now grow up to become superman or superwoman. The child felt like dynamite! The thrill for life, for expanding awareness and control, gained momentum. He felt more and more power to someday do great things for society and make great wealth for himself — every child's dream. Dreams became focussed and closer. The child became highly motivated.

Our Children Lifted the World

In today's civilization, our education does not properly teach children how to think, to integrate and build mental puzzles of new knowledge. In the Twelve-Visions World, education and children's minds will exist at a whole different level.

The Ninth Vision showed me that toddlers' rapid learning curves did not slow down. With the same thrill for life and expanding awareness nurtured by proper education, our children and grandchildren evolved straight into Neothink and soared beyond even the smartest and richest people alive today.

Tomorrow's superchild became a genius of society who, with his peers, made us all rich through brilliant technological breakthroughs that drove prices toward zero and buying power toward infinity, a similar phenomenon to what we have already seen in the computer industry. For the most part, our children and grandchildren lifted the world after the collapse of the ruling class.

On the Path in the Twelve-Visions World

Obviously, tomorrow's superchild needed a lot of knowledge. The discussion method that dominated public schools in the late twentieth century and early twenty-first century vanished. The original idea behind that popular discussion method was that children taught each other in order to help develop their social and communication skills — to better integrate into society. However, tomorrow's superchild needed knowledge. Twelve-Visions-World education used the old-fashioned lecture method in which the teacher did the teaching and filled the child with knowledge.

Now, the superchild rapidly built upon that base of knowledge as he grew up. Unlike us, he was taught conceptual thinking and integrated thinking. To perceive surroundings — see, hear, feel, smell, taste — was automatic and present in most animals. Man's superiority came from his ability to integrate. Tomorrow, our children and grandchildren integrated percepts by common denominators into concepts to generate reason and knowledge. That process was called conceptual thinking. Soon thereafter, their minds could build concept upon concept into puzzles of knowledge. That process was called integrated thinking. Tomorrow, without today's education blocking our children's integrated thinking, they reached out more and more widely and onto Neothink.

Leaving Behind the Old Way

As researched by renowned Professor Leonard Peikoff and detailed in his Philosophy of Education, public schools (and most private schools) in the latter twentieth century and early twenty-first century did not teach children how to integrate the endless percepts into a few simplified concepts. For example, instead of teaching children the simple concepts of phonetics (e.g., a "p" makes a "pa" sound), public schools in the late twentieth century taught the look-say or whole-language method. Phonetics required understanding 44 simple concepts (i.e., sounds); look-say required memorizing how to read every single word the child ever saw (i.e., perceived) with no simplifying common denominators such as phonics (i.e., no concepts).

Indeed, children in all subjects — history, math, science, literature — were taught impotent perceptual thinking and not potent conceptual thinking. History, for example, was taught by unintegrated specific events (i.e., by percepts) and not grouped together by common denominators into concepts. For example, the wrath of human destruction over the centuries was touched on fact by fact (i.e., percept by percept) but not grouped into the basic underlying concept of tyranny, of rule of man — a ruling class. Thus, children did not make connections of logic and, instead, lived their lives in a somewhat helpless "airhead state". They retained very little knowledge since they never learned how to integrate percepts by common denominators into interlocked concepts of logic — the very capacity that separated man from the other animals. In short, children never learned to think. ...Was it not to be expected that essentially all children in the anticivilization grew up to a life of stagnation? Was it any surprise that smart politicians ran things the way they wanted to?

In the Twelve-Visions World, as I saw in my Ninth Vision, children grew up to be geniuses with powerful motivational drives. They were intensely happy, for, they did not experience the tragedy of their dreams fading as we did. Moreover, as those children tomorrow grew up, they used Neothink to not only make their own dreams come true, but ours as well.

To get a metaphorical sense of the power of integrated thinking, imagine, for a moment, a large boulder sits near the edge of a cliff. We find the strongest man in the world and ask him to push that boulder over the cliff. He braces his shoulder against the boulder and pushes with all his might. The boulder does not even budge. Well, we could find the next thousand strongest men in the world, line them up, and watch them one by one push the boulder with all their might. But the boulder never budes. ...That is a metaphor for how we are taught to use our minds in school, thus later at work — to helplessly push our thoughts one by one against the big boulder to success. The big boulder to success never budes.

Now, imagine this: you and I and ten average guys brace our shoulders against the big boulder and, all together, give it one big heave. That boulder would roll right over the cliff! ... That is a metaphor for how our children's minds will work tomorrow with a Twelve-Visions-World education — continually bringing together many thoughts into one powerful force to easily push over the big boulder to success. With this powerful integrated thinking tomorrow, our children grew up to push through all the money-making barriers that even the thousand smartest men today could never move through.

More Creative Than Today's Smartest People

My Ninth Vision clearly showed me that integrated thinking gave our children more creative power tomorrow than the smartest men and women in the world today. That was why our children and grandchildren actually became creative geniuses, even with average IQs!

Our education today in our suppressed civilization gives us powerless perceptual or specialized thinking that leaves us stranded as adults in routine-rut jobs with specialized tasks. Even if someone today is very good at what he does, he is usually powerless at fulfilling his deepest dreams, sort of like those world's strongest men powerless at pushing over the big boulder.

In tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World, however, our children grew up learning how to snap thoughts together into an integrated force that easily pushed over the big boulder to major success.

In today's civilization, the same forces that hold back super entrepreneurs and super technologies also hold back our children's development. You see, career politicians and regulatory bureaucrats increasingly control our educational system. The ordinary person graduates from our public schools with severe short circuits; he or she cannot put together the connections needed to be creative. He or she, in short, cannot integrate.

Make A Change

Knock out of your mind the passive acceptance of your children and grandchildren settling into a specialized routine rut. They can escape the stagnation-trap you perhaps endured.

Imagine their most ambitious dreams, and daydream about them for a few minutes. In your mind's eye, block out the obstacles that will hold them down in a stagnant routine rut. Instead, see your children and grandchildren leading the way to exhilarating success.

With all that you know now, that daydream strikingly demonstrates to you (as it did for me) that, in today's suppressed civilization, they will grow up, trapped in a terminal rut. As simple as it may seem, that striking snapshot of their lifelong stagnation-trap can set off an act of self-preservation: as happened to me, you might start seeking the Twelve-Visions-Party agenda.

With a Twelve-Visions-World education, as seen in my Ninth Vision, our children and grandchildren frequently came up with major marketing ideas, for marketing ideas were simply an exercise of the mind: of finding common denominators that served a lot of people's needs. They then built success upon those structured concepts, say those great marketing ideas, through forward-movement integrated thinking.

Their creativity and energy went toward identifying then servicing society's needs. Indeed, those geniuses — our children and grandchildren — solved people's problems and needs. As a result, enormous creativity and energy rushed into society. Prosperity reigned throughout America, then across our planet. Exhilaration and wealth filled our children's and grandchildren's lives.

Knowledge is power. But creating new knowledge is super power. The richest people today created something new. Through forward-movement integrated thinking, they integrated lots of existing knowledge. While steadily putting together existing knowledge, they hit critical points that broke through into new knowledge. While steadily building their success puzzles piece by piece, they reached a point when they had snapped together a creative new puzzle-picture. At that point, they experienced Neothink. Tomorrow, our children evolved into the Neothink mentality.

Realize, our graduating geniuses were not necessarily gifted with creativity. Not until they built a certain size success puzzle did they begin springing into creativity. You see, as they built their success puzzles piece by piece, they began to see puzzle-pictures gradually forming. As they saw their puzzle-pictures coming together, they broke into new knowledge while seeing how their unique pictures and their missing pieces must look like. Then they began creating by completing those unique puzzle-pictures.

Forming The Bridge to Money and Power

Sometimes we wonder how a money/power giant got from point A in school to point B on top of the world. Building success puzzles, piece by piece, formed his bridges to money and power. To build those success puzzles, piece by piece, though, requires integrated thinking. Tomorrow, under the new code of education, that happened automatically to ordinary people. Today, under the old code of education, that seldom happens to even extraordinary people.

I observed in my Ninth Vision that it was integrated thinking that eventually enabled the entire human race to mentally cross the bridges to a whole new way of orchestrating our minds in the Twelve-Visions World, something we called the Neothink Mentality. Neothink was so superior that once it got started, its natural advantages quickly engaged people everywhere.

Neothink comes from compilations of complex concepts that, when pulled together, reveal startling, synergistic advancements of human knowledge. (Twelve Visions, the book, is an example of Neothink.)

Very rare today, Neothink became our children's and grandchildren's normal mentality in tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World. We, too, eventually evolved into Neothink. With Neothink, ordinary people routinely contributed life-lifting values to mankind.

Becoming Geniuses

When that happened, we discovered our unknown selves: our buried genius within. The measurement for mental power changed from intelligence tests for IQ to the efficacy of one's integrated thinking. IQ no longer mattered (save for subnormal, mental retardation, of course). In time, the superior Neothink mentality swept across our planet. Babies naturally grew into and children naturally stayed in the Neothink mentality.

Tomorrow's schools, as seen in my Ninth Vision, taught our children and grandchildren how to Neothink. As they grew up, they joined the geniuses. Indeed, living exhilarating lives instead of boring routine ruts, they joined the entrepreneurial geniuses and created wonderful values for the world.

Your children and grandchildren built larger and larger puzzles of knowledge with integrated thinking. With that integrated, puzzle-building thinking, surpassing their best dreams became natural and fun. They lived the way man is supposed to live. Highly motivated and making more and more conceptual advancements, they learned how to pull the integration string. That was when they saw their first puzzle-pictures. Pulling together their conceptual advancements into one interlocked, synergistic advancement of knowledge, one clear puzzle-picture of new knowledge, they experienced the euphoria of Neothink. Soon, they crossed over to the Neothink mentality and continued to pull together those synergistic advancements of knowledge in their lines of work or interests. Of course, they were greatly rewarded with prestige, wealth, happiness, and love.

My Ninth Vision showed me that sometime in the twenty-first century, snapping together synergistic advancements of knowledge became the norm for ordinary people graduating in the Twelve-Visions World.

Recommended Reading:

Inside Secrets, Mark Hamilton (nonfiction) teaches adults integrated thinking in their careers.

Twelve Visions, Mark Hamilton (nonfiction) discloses the turnkey advantages of tomorrows Twelve-Visions World.

Superpuzzle, Mark Hamilton (fiction) lets us experience living in tomorrow's Twelve-Visions World.