It is important to regularly continue to check rly time tables for any changes throughout the year. Trains can arrive at a station earlier than the scheduled arrival time as per Indian railway time table, but by strict rules they can leave no earlier than the scheduled departure time as prescribed in the Indian train time table. Trains may or may not stop at a station as per the scheduled halt time as prescribed in the railway table. In other words, trains can depart from a station before the scheduled stop time as per the railway grid - provided they do not leave the station before the scheduled departure time as per the railway time table. In several stoppage sections of the train, train timetables included considerable time buffer as part of train schedule time tables. This allows train to restore time as it runs in a delayed fashion. For some trains, it is observed that IRCTC timetable differs from what is prescribed in the main Indian Railway Timetable. Travellers are proposed to double check. - FAQ Q) How can I check the timetable of the ASHRAM EXP SPL (02916) train on RailYatri?
