COMMUNITY PROJECT NO. 1: A BILL OF HEALTH

EDITORIAL

This community, coming from its worst disaster since the 1918 influenza epidemic, is today as never before aware of the peculiar nature of the air-borne malady which claimed nineteen lives over the week-end, and brought forth to the citizens.

The community's sympathies go out to the bereaved families, and sympathy is a comforting means of comforting the bereaved. In the name of those who died, it is not for us, as a community, to shed tears, but to study the conditions which brought about the loss of their lives.

This is a time for careful and considered judgment, rather than careless talk or ill-informed remarks which serve no good purpose and may result in irreparable harm.

We hope that the investigations on many sides, conducted by proper authorities, are neither unduly hasty nor will be used for political purposes.

A Message to Our Employes and Neighbors
in DONORA

TWO WEEKS have passed since the smog which enveloped the Monongahela River Valley brought death and illness to residents of Donora.

It is with deep sincerity that we, as a member of the Donora community, extend our sympathy to those who have lost their loved ones.

During the period immediately following the tragedy, we made no effort to enter public debate about the causes of the tragedy. We then made no attempt to refute charges against the Zinc Works which we operate here, because we believed—and still believe—that accusations or recriminations are out of place during a period of crisis.

Our conviction from the start has been that the Zinc Works was not the cause of the disaster. That is our honest belief, and nothing has yet come to light which in any way supports the theory that the Zinc Works was the source of the trouble.

There is no evidence at all to point to this particular plant (the Zinc Works) as having been the source of harmful concentrations which killed people.”

Despite these assurances, we do not propose to be complacent—to sit by and assume that—nothing more need be done. On the contrary, we are doing all we can to encourage and support the utmost all officially authorized investigations. This we will continue to do. We offer our full cooperation in furnishing whatever information will shed light on the subject.

We have enlisted the services of the Industrial Hygiene Foundation with headquarters at the Mellon Institute—an outside agency of recognized standing—in an effort to track down any factors which may have contributed to the tragedy. The representatives of the Foundation are now investigating the matter in every way possible.

Attempts To 'Hush' Trade Talks With Hitler Seen In Famous "Spy" Papers

U.S. State Department Tried To Save Demo Party Embarrassment

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 - (UP) - The infamous "Spy Papers" disclosed today that State Department officials sought to "hush up" trade talks with Hitler in order to save the Democratic Administration from an embarrassing spectacle.

The disclosure was made by the House Un-American Activities Committee, which earlier this year held hearings on the matter. The committee has now included one paper said to have been censored in Alger Hiss' handwriting.

The documents, allegedly stolen from State Department files years ago and by a red tie, showed that the State Department conferred on two main fields of American Foreign Policy concerning the Far East.

The State Department got a tipoff on Hitler's plans for conquest of Czechoslovakia months before the Nazis moved into that country. Three French officials as early as 1935 thought that war between the United States and Nazi Germany was imminent.

The papers were surrendered to the committee by Alger Hiss, who had resigned as special assistant to the American Activities Committee in 1937. Hiss was accused of perjury and was indicted by a Federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy and perjury.

DEATH OVER DONORA

Smoky, lethal fog kills 19 people in a little Pennsylvania mill town

The 13,000 people of Donora, Pa., perched on a hillside over a bend in the Monongahela River, are used to living under a black cloud of smoke and soot from the steel plants, the railroad yards and the Donora Zinc Works. Around the zinc works no grass grows. Even up on the hill, where a few farmers try to make a living, vegetables are covered with soot and all the sheep are black. At bedtime, when Donorans put out their lights, they can still see smoke swirling across the ceilings.

From Oct. 27 to Nov. 2 a fog bank lay over the valley and the smoke and fumes mixed with the fog. Then, on Friday night, people started waking, gasping for air. Doctors went into action, one of them rushing down a street giving adrenalin injections to choking citizens who came out of their houses through the smog, pleading to be next. Within 48 hours 19 people were dead, more than 400 sick.

When rain finally came and washed the fumes away, Donora buried its dead (above) and the panic subsided. All of the dead had had respiratory illnesses, and the people of Donora were accustomed to the town’s high incidence of respiratory deaths. Although four groups were investigating the deadly source, Donorans were cautious about getting tough with the industry that provided their living. For a few days the zinc works shut down, even then sending smoke over the town. But Donorans looked at the thiny drifting smog and said cheerfully, “This is the clearest day we’ve had in years.”

THE SMOG, smoke and fumes from the mills mixing with fog bank, still drifts through Donora on Sunday morning while sun tries to break through at upper right. That night rain finally washed most of it away.
