CONSERVATION OF SAFRANBOLU

The project is the “Conservation of the City of Safranbolu” by all tangible and intangible heritage and values. The Project has human dimension, too, which comprises the consciousness and the ability to adapt the socioeconomic changes and physical dimensions, which comprises all the preservation, restoration and renovation of her historic heritage. Safranbolu is well-preserved heritage city but as a living settlement complies with all requirements of a modern city.

The residential buildings of Historic Safranbolu are mainly wooden skeleton system on rubble stone ground floors. The skeletons are in-filled with mainly mud-bricks. None residential buildings like mosques, public baths are made out of cut stone. All restoration and renovation works have been made with the local materials, local workmanship like carpenters, masons, etc, with traditional techniques.

In the last 35 years, over 200 private, public and religious buildings have been restored or renovated. About 125 of these are historic houses from 18th and 19th Centuries. Around 75 of these have been restored by the governmental institution but more important than these 125 buildings have been restored by private people and companies.

Conservation has not only provided the people an important economic activity but also with deep consciousness. They are aware that importance of the conservation and tidily prevent their architectural and cultural heritage.

Safranbolu is a pioneer of conservation in city scale. The success story of Safranbolu became model for other historic cities of Turkey like, Amasya, Beypazarı, Kastamonu, etc.

Safranbolu is one of the rarest cities where people and historic buildings live in immense harmony.

Most of the buildings are used for cultural and tourism purposes. Yearly, 450 thousand tourists from all around Turkey as well as abroad visit Safranbolu. This not only brings economic means for the conservation and life but also good understanding between different cultures.
