

Approach view.

The wall of the new city protects it from sandstorms.

Roofs of the city.

Narrow intersecting streets in a compact urban tissue.

Exteriors of the buildings are made of lime, sand and concrete, only needing care every five years at little cost.

Night view of a typical facade.

One of the main aims is to preserve green areas around the city.

Inside the city, small streets provides shade and calm.

Light plays through the balcony parapet.

Master bedroom.

Coloured decorations on limed wall.

Dining area.

