

ENOUGH... ENOUGHNESS...

A bit of context is needed, first, I think. Some of you may remember that some time ago Pastor Lucas preached a sermon in which he coined a word to convey a subtlety of meaning. Several months later, and several months ago, now, I had the following dream. (True - ask the Wednesday morning people. I told them about it at the time.)

There were three of us in the surgical waiting room. (I've been in enough of them to know one when I see one.) Teresa's mother; a young girl, alone, 8 or 9, -- who is not Teresa; and me. I didn't know them, and hadn't spoken to either of them, but, in the way of dreams, that's who they were.

Teresa's mom -- 40-ish, was knitting a beautiful something. All soft colors and an intricate pattern. I can only crochet. --- I wish I could knit like that.

Not-Teresa was drawing a picture - chalk, I think, and brilliant colors. A striking thing for a young girl - for anyone. As I grew from child to teen to adult, I perfected stick figures. --- I wish I could draw like that.

I was reading; And came across that rare thing - a perfect sentence. Perfect in structure, in word flow, in mood. I read it over and over, admiring it. --- I wish I could write a sentence like that.

Now here it comes. I didn't hear it - and I didn't see it, but again in the way of dreams, above and just to my right .....ENOUGHNESS. What????? The oddity of it woke me up - there would be no explanation in the dream. On reflection, though, I think if it means anything, it says THAT'S ENOUGH measuring and comparing oneself against others. We are either found wanting and left feeling negatively about ourselves, or we measure up positively, and can assume a false (and annoying) superiority. Neither is a desirable outcome. Another possibility is that we need to recognize that we are and have ENOUGH. That we can happily enjoy the skills and talents of others, and freely share our own.

And anyway, if we're making up words. I prefer ENOUGHITUDE.
