*A Call To Worship Don Shepherd — Liturgist

One: We gather today not to write the gospel, but to live it—out loud. For the gospel is not ours to control or defend, but good news to embody with our lives.

All: In a world full of noise and competing voices, we turn toward a deeper call: to practice love that can be seen, to pursue justice that can be felt, to offer compassion that changes lives.

One: Scripture reminds us—faith is not measured by what we say, but by what we do. For religion made only of words is empty, but faith lived in action becomes a witness to God’s love.

All: We are called to be salt that brings flavor, light that shines in the darkness, a people whose lives point beyond ourselves so that all may see—and give glory to God.

One: So let us set aside performative faith, release the need to please others, and step boldly into the good news that has already been written, already been spoken, already been lived in Jesus Christ.

All: We didn’t write the gospel—but we choose, to live it out loud.

We will be getting messy, so wear old clothes and bring an apron!
Bring a pair of scissors if you have them,
and some magazines to cut up.
All are welcome, but please RSVP to amystamper3@gmail.com and/or nc2dancer@gmail.com
