One: To those who have mothered us— who have carried, birthed, adopted, fostered, mentored, protected, and nurtured life in all its forms

All: We honor you.

One: To those who showed up with steady love, who made room at the table, who told the truth, who fought for our dignity, who held us together when the world tried to pull us apart—

All: We give thanks for you.

One: To those whose mothering has been unseen or unrecognized, to those who mother in chosen families and communities, to those who have mothered through struggle, sacrifice, and resilience—

All: We see you.

One: And to those for whom this day carries grief, longing, or complicated stories, we hold space for you, too.

All: Today, we celebrate the many ways love takes shape among us and we give thanks for all who have mothered us into being. Amen
