

Spoil Your Grandchildren Constructively

While it's great to want to give generously to your grandchildren, be sure to obey two basic rules when doing so. Make sure what you're doing is: okay with their parents, and helping your grandchildren grown into better people. Consider giving gifts of time, character building, and prayer rather than just money or things. Don't undermine your grandchildren's ability to learn the responsibility that comes from working hard and earning their rewards. And don't undermine their parents' authority to teach them that important lesson.
