An Imperishable Prize

Like so many others, I love the Olympics. One of my new favorite sports moments happened Friday when Italian Speed Skater set an Olympic Record, won the gold and then celebrated motherhood and a medal with her toddler and the world.

The Olympics always remind me of a sports illustration that Paul uses,

"Do you not know that in a race all the runners run, but only one receives the prize? So run that you may obtain it. ²⁵ Every athlete exercises self-control in all things. They do it to receive a perishable wreath, but we an imperishable. ²⁶ So I do not run aimlessly; I do not box as one beating the air. ²⁷ But I discipline my body and keep it under control, ^[b] lest after preaching to others I myself should be disqualified."

1 Corinthians 9:24-27

Throughout chapter 9 (and 1 Corinthians) he's been challenged in his faith and ministry. Just before these verses, he explains that he's become all things in order to share the gospel with others that he might save some. Then he explains his own walk with Christ, that like a runner, he's working towards a prize at the finish line ("well done, good and faithful servant," as well as "crowns"), making sure that as he leads others to Christ, he would not falter in his own faith. The finish line awaits with an eternal reward, an imperishable one.

If you are watching the Olympics, be reminded that faith is a marathon and not a sprint (15K Cross Country ski race during the Winter Olympics) and that our prize is not a perishable wreath, or fake gold medal. We live by the Spirit, enjoy Christ's righteousness credited to us, and endure until He returns or calls us home.
