

PK's Perspectives ... To the one

To the one who gave up what you prayed for in exchange for what God had for you...

To the one who gave up the job you always wanted because God said He had something better.

To the one who broke up with the person who was everything you prayed for because God said He had something better.

To the one who gave up a blessing and it has cost you.

To the one who has yet to see that better that He promised.

To the one still in the in-between, in the process, in the waiting.

God has not forgotten you.

He will bring His promise to fulfillment very soon.

And He has something greater for you than what you prayed for. Greater than what you thought possible. Greater than the thing you gave up. Greater than what the sacrifice cost you.

But not just in the fulfillment.

He has something greater for you - right now - in the waiting.

He has big plans for you in the promise.

And in the waiting.

Yes - when you get on the other side, to your promised land. When you are enjoying the fruit of saying "Yes!" to God.

And He has great plans for you RIGHT NOW. In the waiting. In the process. In the in-between.

He is good. Choose to believe it today. ~Sarah Beth Boyette

Sarah Beth's parents were members of my former church in Glennville, GA — in fact, I had the honor of officiating her parent's wedding. Sarah Beth was 4 yrs/old when God called us to Cochran FBC and, via Facebook, I have "watched" Sarah Beth grow-up into an amazing 21 yr/old woman who passionately pursues God. Today she posted the above on her FB page. Her words encouraged me and I can't help but think these thoughts will encourage you, too! Grace & peace, love you, PK.
