

“Here am I” comes from an old Hebrew word: hineni.

Commitment is giving ourselves completely to another, saying “Here am I, I will do whatever is required of me.”

Jesus demands his disciples to be committed to him, his agenda, which is the kingdom of God and his people, the Church.

Malachi’s diagnosis of the lack of motivation for commitment: people have forgotten that God is God.

When you give the seconds of yourself to your relationships, your relationships do not last.

How do we recommit to God? Through corporate worship, which reminds us who God is.
