

What did the three friends do wrong?

First, the three friends jumped to _____ about Job's suffering.

Their reasoning was a syllogism: God sends calamities upon _____ people only. You have _____ a calamity. Therefore you must be _____.

Job's friends' devastating _____ was to apply a generalization to Job's situation, without knowing what they're talking about.

Human tendency is to give a _____ for the suffering — be it right, be it wrong — than to accept the _____ at the heart of suffering.

Second, the three friends were determined to _____ God by placing the _____ on Job.

The truth is that God doesn't need our _____ and those who are suffering do not need to bear the brunt of _____.

When one is suffering, one does not need _____ and _____ and for us to _____ things and point out _____.

What did Job's friends do right?

1. They _____.
2. They _____.
3. They _____ with each other.
4. They showed appropriate _____.
5. They showed _____ with Job.
6. They _____ with Job.
7. They didn't _____.