

What does it mean to have a authentic connection with another in a world where most of our connecting is inauthentic?

Why do we fail to authentically connect?
Because we are afraid of what people might see if they truly see us.

Yet, when we fail to authentically connect, either with God or with others, we fail to be truly known by anyone.

Question: Who truly knows you?

Why do we settle for inauthentic connections when God calls us to authentically connect with him and each other?

When it comes to sin, it is not a question about how much or how bad, but rather about how aware we are of it.

Our inauthenticity keeps us blind to our sin.

What we learn from the unnamed woman is that when we are authentic in our relationships, we receive the grace necessary to be transformed.