What Can We Learn from Each Other?

“Know this, my beloved brothers: let every person be quick to hear, slow to speak, slow to anger.” –James 1:19

Years ago, I sat in a circle of folding chairs with a group of our senior adults and listened to one church member tell the story of how the First Baptist Church of Moran (the church I was pastoring at the time) once met in a brush arbor during a revival that lasted three weeks. She was twelve at the time, and the preacher kept preaching until the mosquitoes nearly carried him off. Everyone laughed, but what struck me wasn't the humor; it was the way her eyes lit up when a teenager in the group asked, “Did you really walk three miles to get there?” Suddenly the room tilted: the teenager was learning resilience from an octogenarian, and the senior adult was learning that her story still mattered... even to someone born after the internet!

I've seen the reverse just as often. I've watched young believers show their older counterparts how to utilize technology, whether it was the Bible app on a phone, the sound system for a volunteer, setting up video in the fellowship hall to make overflow space for a funeral, etc. I've also seen younger believers teach truths from Scripture that were fresh to their older counterparts, despite their decades-deep knowledge of Scripture.

Scripture never puts an age limit on who can teach and who must learn. The elderly Eli mentored the boy Samuel (1 Samuel 3); the teenage Mary received insight from the aged Elizabeth (Luke 1). Paul told Timothy, “Don't let anyone look down on you because you are young” (2 Timothy 4:12), then turned right around and urged the church to honor widows who had walked with God for decades (1 Timothy 5). The message is clear: wisdom flows in every direction when hearts stay humble.

That's why I'm asking all of us - whether we learned our memory verses on flannelgraph or on a smartphone - to practice three simple habits during this next season at FBC Grandview:

1. Ask one question. Each Sunday, ask someone at least twenty years older or younger than you a question about their faith. “What's one way God surprised you this week?” works for any age.

2. Share one story. Be ready to tell a short story of God's faithfulness from your own life. Keep it under two minutes; the goal is exchange, not monologue.

3. Pray one sentence. Close your conversation by praying a single sentence of blessing over the other person, right there in the hallway or parking lot.

These habits fit anywhere - before Sunday School, after worship, over coffee in the welcome center. They cost nothing but a little courage and a lot of curiosity. What do you think? Will you give it a try?

The Book of James tells us to be “quick to listen.” In a culture that prizes being the expert, the Spirit invites us to become expert listeners first. When we do, the body of Christ stops functioning like separate generations bolted together and starts moving like one living organism - every joint supplying what the others lack (Ephesians 4:16). That's the difference between merely being a multi-generational church (a church whose membership consists of all ages) and an intergenerational church (a church whose membership consists of all ages and those ages do life with and for one another). I'm praying that in the coming days we'll surprise ourselves with how much we still have to learn from one another.

Your Pastor,
Corey Cornutt

Small groups do make a difference. You are given an opportunity to get to know others better but also are able to get closer to the Lord through Bible studies, discussions, activities, etc. Not only does First Baptist offer age appropriate Sunday School classes on Sundays but there are several more areas you may want to consider for yourself and/or family. Wednesday evenings offer groups for our kids and youth as well as for ladies, men, and a prayer group. On Sunday evenings, different Faith Bible Institute classes are available on a semester basis. If those don't work for you or you need more, check with Pastor Corey about small groups that meet in homes throughout the week.

We have a class suited for you!
