DID YOU KNOW?

The original church location and birthplace of Ringgold Baptist Church was located a few hundred yards south of the Ringgold rail station in a building listed as the “Old Norman House.” Services were conducted here for two or three years prior to the erection of the first building. The first building built specifically for the church was erected in 1879. This structure was later dismantled and moved in an effort to enlist some large families living in the Mountain Hill area. The same plans and lumber were used to rebuild in the new location. In the 1890s the members and current pastor were not satisfied with the new location and made the decision to move the church back to its now current location, again using the same plans and lumber.
