

Celebrating 33 Years of Service

a Tribute to Jennifer Pugh

In recognition of her tireless and selfless dedication to the City and its residents Jennifer's friends have planned for a one-of-a-kind stained glass window. The work is inspired by her love of the city, and in particular the Library, where it will be installed as a lasting tribute to her 33 year career with the City of New Haven.

The window has been designed by local artist and Jennifer's good friend, Robert Mele, and will be constructed by Branford stained glass artist Jayne Crowley. The work reflects the nine-squares of New Haven and depicts parts of the City Jennifer loved most. The above panel reflects just one of the images that will be part of the final work. The window will be completed and ready for installation in conjunction with the opening of the planned new "public" space on the library's first floor.

We look forward to having a beautiful, unique, lasting tribute to a special friend and dedicated public servant.
