Daily Devotions & Scriptures

Monday, October 12 Read Psalm 147

Notice that this psalm of faith and praise is presented in the plural. The Israelites understood that they were a blessed people and their faithfulness to God was practiced corporately as well as individually. In an era of “personal belief,” do we place less emphasis on the communal nature of Christianity? Why or why not?

Tuesday Oct. 13 Read Galatians 6:1-10

Where is the balance in this scripture between personal responsibility as a Christian and responsibility towards the entire faith community (church)? How can we “bear one another’s burdens” without carrying all of another’s responsibility for the work of the church? Be as specific as possible. Is there anybody in the church carrying your rightful load? Pray over this today.

Wednesday, Oct. 14 Read John 15:1-17

In what ways can being an active part of the church be considered “abiding” in Christ? Often, we are seduced by the notion that all that is expected of us is to have a (mostly mental) belief in Christ and go to worship occasionally. How might this passage redefine for folks with that sort of attitude what being a Christian is all about? What “fruit” are we expected to bear?

Thursday, Oct. 15 Read 1 Corinthians 12:12-27

How might this passage be used to answer the question: “What does it mean to be a member of a church?” Look closely at vv.22-27. How does this section inform us as to how we are to act towards one another in the church? Who might be some we might mistakenly consider “less honorable” or “weaker?” What are some of the ways we can bind our particular part of the Body closer together? Give some specific, applicable suggestions.

Friday, Oct. 16 Read Romans 12:1-21

Try to get the sense of the meaning of this section by reading it backwards: start with vv.5-8 then read vv.3-4. How should we see the unique gifts of each member of the church? How can such an insight be seen as a “renewing” of our minds to a more God-oriented perspective? Do vv.9-21 paint a picture of the church as you know it? Why or why not? How can we be more like the Body depicted here?

Saturday, Oct. 17 Read Hosea 11:1-7

Note here that God does not condemn specific individuals but the general trend of the people. In what ways do our attitudes and actions, both positive and negative, affect the rest of the church? The sin God addresses in Hosea is that of faithlessness: outwardly declaring that we are God’s while spending our real energies and talents chasing after everything but God. Where does this tendency sometimes surface in the church?
