The God of New Things

*“I am about to do a new thing; now it springs forth, do you not perceive it?
I will make a way in the wilderness and rivers in the desert.”* Isaiah 43:19

Hello. My name is Rick and I play video games. Please understand. I do not have a basement “man cave” with a huge TV and surround-sound speakers where I spend hours immersed in the virtual world. I have never had tendinitis in my thumb from repeatedly pressing buttons on a game controller. However, I enjoy having a game or three on my phone to play when I have downtime. Over the years I’ve enjoyed such classics as Tetris, Yahtzee, Words with Friends and Trivia Crack. A few months back, a friend introduced me to Clash of Clans. You may have seen the TV commercials. Clash of Clans is a game involving construction and destruction. In short, I build a base with walls and defenses and others attempt to destroy my base using dragons and wizards and giants (oh my). When I say others, I mean anyone in the world with a wireless device and an internet connection. Of course, I also have the opportunity to turn their bases into virtual mush. This appeals to my strategic side.

Clash of Clans is a team game. My team (clan) has about 40 members and is international. We have players who hail from Ireland, Iran, Egypt, Canada and all over the USA. We utilize an in-game chat room to coordinate team business. Often, the language of choice shifts from English to Farsi to Arabic, depending on who is communicating.

It continues to be a true cross-cultural experience.

The thing I love most about my team is when our chats shift away from the game to more personal subjects. I have had conversations with the Iranian contingent about life in an Islamic nation. I have had conversations with the Irish contingent about the global economy. As a team we supported a teammate in New York who recently lost his mom. He asked for prayer and we prayed. While I have never met most of these people, I have grown to respect and care about them. I often wonder if this type of multi-national communication is what our world needs to avoid destructive stereotypes and easy violence. Even more, I believe God is working in the midst of the game to bring about a little more peace on earth.

Perhaps you are skeptical. God working through a video game? Why not? God is always doing new things. Sometimes we try to limit God to the places, situations and moments that we have deemed holy instead of allowing God to make our entire lives holy. We have no problem discovering God in a church sanctuary or while watching a sunset or while listening to an inspiring piece of music. On the flip side, we have “diminished sight” when we attempt to see God working in government offices, bars, sports arenas or through social media — anywhere we have deemed purely secular. It does not mean that God is not there; most often it means we fail to look.

God is always doing new things, working in the lives of new people and offering new words of encouragement and life. Perhaps what we need most in our lives this Easter season is the resurrection of our imaginations. I have experienced God working in the chat room of a time-wasting video game. I did not expect it and certainly did not look for it until it became so obvious I could not miss it. Now I wonder where else God is working.

Enjoy the blessings of Easter!

Arcadia Cares: Food for Kidz

Second Annual Packathon Assembles Over 73,000 Meals

Several hundred volunteers from all over the Arcadia neighborhood and beyond converged on the Prince of Peace gym on Saturday, February 27, to help at the Second Annual Arcadia Cares: Food for Kidz Packathon. The final result was simply amazing — 73,296 meals were packed.

The packathon volunteers participated in assembly-line packing of meals, where they worked for one-hour shifts or longer. The packathon started at 9 a.m. and ended at 1 p.m. Volunteers ranged from ages 3 to 80-plus, and represented a myriad of groups throughout the Arcadia neighborhood, including Troop 6 Boy Scouts, Daisy, Brownie and Girl Scout troops, church, school and business groups, sports teams, entire extended families, and others in the neighborhood looking to do well by doing good. Approximately 400 volunteers worked at stations to assemble the various ingredients into an industrial-grade plastic bag.

Based on last year's event which assembled 62,000 meals, this year's goal was to pack 70,000 meals. When the dust settled after this year's event, that goal was surpassed — 60,768 oatmeal and 12,528 rice and bean meals were packed. Of the meals packed, 80 percent were transported to Valley View Community Food Bank for local distribution in the Phoenix area to shelters and other needy venues. The Food for Kidz organization will ship the remaining meals to international destinations.

The Food for Kidz model provides individually packed, highly nutritious and filling meals packed with instant oatmeal and other ingredients for a healthy breakfast meal. In addition to the oatmeal packages, the Arcadia volunteers also packed meals with rice, beans, vitamins and dehydrated vegetables. The meals are reconstituted with water. Each meal provides a day's worth of vitamins and nutrients to enable children to grow up strong and fight off diseases and sickness.

This year each rice & beans box was packed with 42 bags (6 meals per bag) for a total of 252 meals per box. Each oatmeal box was packed with 36 bags (8 meals each), for a total of 288 meals per box. Each box will feed one child for 7 months (or longer) at a cost of approximately $35. All of the donations received before and during the packathon event were used directly to pay for the ingredients.

Pastor Rick Sherrill served as Master of Ceremonies of the event, encouraging the volunteers' efforts and announcing the meal tally after each shift to cheers from the participants. It truly was a neighborhood-wide event and plans are already underway to coordinate next year's third annual packathon, which will add to the total of 136,000 meals packed during the first two packathons.

On behalf of the Pack-a-Thon Committee (Audrey Cox, Steve Crofton (Chair), Steve Edgar, Kathy Flores, Lynne McGinley, Heidi McNeil Staudenmaier, Jacob Staudenmaier, and Craig Steblay), a special THANK YOU to all Prince of Peace members who assisted in making the Second Annual Pack-a-Thon a major success. If anyone is interested in getting involved in next year's Pack-a-Thon, please contact Steve Crofton.

Passion Projects are a specific area of service that we focus on for a period of time so we can be more aware of the issues, as well as partner in service with the project.

In April and May our Passion Project will be the Navajo Lutheran Mission. During the youth trip to the mission this summer, the young people will work on various service projects around the community. Donations we make will be our way to partner and serve the mission!

More than 50 years ago Lutheran Christian missionaries arrived in Rock Point, AZ, a remote village near the Four Corners area. They were leased five acres of land on which to build the Mission. The very first building on this land was a combined church, clinic and two apartments built in early 1954. Today Rock Point is a gas station and convenience store, a Laundromat and Post Office, High School, a Chapter House and Senior Center — and 3000 people living on the land in family clans. Food and medical services are still more than 50 miles away and general shopping 115 miles away in New Mexico. The Mission campus provides a charter school site for K-6th grade for 70 children, a Private Christian Kindergarten, Health Clinic “Wellness Center”, and an ELCA congregation, the House of Prayer.

News from Maasae Girls School

A letter from Naomi Musa

“I thank God because of this new year and am very happy because am doing well in my studies.

“I would like to tell you about my course which I started to take last year 2014. In my course there are many subjects...livestock diseases, pharmacology, parasitology, mathematics, English, poultry, animal nutrition and microbiology.

“Most people are keeping livestock and they don’t have any knowledge about their livestock so I decide to take this course so that to help them. I will help them by treat their livestock and advise them on how to move from poor management of their livestock to a better stage.

“Last year in November I went to Mpwampwa Camps for field practice. I learned many things about my course. I hope this year I will go for another field practical because it’s important to have field practices so as to understand well in action.”

Maasae Girls School Now Solar Powered!

The Maasae Girls School is now solar powered! The project, completed at a cost of approximately $48,000, ensures that the girls will not have to worry about frequent electrical power outages that prevented them from studying in the evening and raised safety concerns. Being located near the equator, it gets dark year-round by 6 p.m. which made it difficult for the girls to complete their studying.

President’s Report

by Craig Myrmeil

Recently, a friend of mine asked me for advice concerning his dental office. He and a couple of friends have been buying and operating dental practices as an investment for the past few years. My friend wanted advice on how to build the practices and make them more successful. Their goal is to own many practices, build up the production, and eventually sell them to a bigger player for a nice profit. My initial advice was to hire the best employees and pay them well. My friend comes from the business world and sees only the bottom line. When his best employees asked for a raise, he asked my advice and I told him to pay them what they are worth. He declined and now is short three of his best workers. From personal experience, I predict that in the coming months he will find production decreasing due to having to train new employees. I became a dentist to earn a living, but another big factor was that I would be able to help people. Somewhere along the line helping people has taken a back seat to profits, sharing the wealth took a back seat to increasing the bottom line. It appears that throughout the working world, the only goal of a business is the bottom line with little regard for those that make a business successful. I believe in rewarding not only the business owner, but the people that helped him succeed. As Christians, shouldn't a more level playing field be something we should all strive for? Maybe it's the greed and not the wealth that makes it so hard to fit through the eye of the needle.

Leviticus 25:39 "If your brother becomes poor beside you and sells himself to you, you shall not make him serve you as a slave."

It was with a heavy heart that Nicole Hilden informed the Preschool community that their beloved teacher, Susan Keller, had passed away after a brave battle with cancer. Susan was a teacher at Prince of Peace for over 20 years. While tears flowed, they also smiled knowing that teacher Keller is no longer in pain and in the loving arms of her Father in heaven. Her example of faith, courage and strength touched many.

Tips for Caregivers

by Beth Schneider

An informal caregiver is anyone, frequently a family member, who provides help to another person. Typically caregivers assist with activities of daily living, provide transportation and help with health or medical concerns. Most caregiving is associated with caring for older persons, but younger persons also need care as the result of an illness or accident. Care may be needed for either short or extended periods of time, depending upon whether the person receiving care is recuperating or gradually getting worse. In 2011 the National Survey of Caregiving conducted a study of caregivers for those 65 and older. It reported that 18 million caregivers provided 1.3 billion hours of care monthly to 9 million older adults. This number continues to increase.

Caregiving is stressful. It is important that caregivers take care of themselves. This includes eating healthy, getting enough sleep, exercising regularly, making time for oneself, and avoiding tobacco and excessive use of alcohol. Signs that a caregiver is suffering from burnout and needs to do more, include feeling overwhelmed or constantly worried, always feeling tired, sleeping too little or too much, gaining or losing weight, becoming easily irritated or angry, feeling sad, experiencing frequent headaches or other physical pain, abusing alcohol, and/or losing interest in activities enjoyed in the past. Suffering from one or more of these is a sign that the time has come to follow the suggestions below.

The following suggestions help avoid or cope with caregiver stress. First, begin the discussion of caregiving before the need arises, to determine the expectations of the person needing care and the caregiver. Making decisions relating to caregiving during a crisis never goes well. Accept help at the onset and don't wait until feeling overwhelmed. Make specific suggestions as to what others can do. If people don't volunteer, ask if someone can assume responsibility for specific projects. Focus on the care you can provide. Remember, there is no such thing as a perfect caregiver. No one can do everything. Set realistic goals by taking small steps, prioritizing, making lists, and establishing a daily routine. Perhaps most importantly learn to say "no." Organize medical information and make sure legal documents are in order.

Get connected with other caregivers and join support groups. Almost every disease has a support group and thanks to the internet, it is relatively easy to locate one in your locale. Knowing that you aren't alone helps. Research community resources. Also, it is easy to become so involved with caregiving that you lose touch with family and friends. Moral support is as important as the support received from support groups. Finally, stay healthy. See your doctor and be sure that you are up to date on your immunizations.
