The Jewish Calendar

"Bible-In-A-Year" Reading Schedule

for 5787 | 2026 - 2027

prepared by: Rabbi Eric Meiri | Skokie, IL

The purpose of this unique Bible Reading Schedule is to incorporate reading the Torah portions for the weekly Parashot into a "Bible-In-A-Year" Reading Schedule that follows the Jewish calendar year (a lunisolar calendar). It also includes traditional readings (i.e. Megillot & Holy Day Parashot) at their appointed times throughout the year. This reading calendar will take you through the entire Bible in a Jewish calendar year. The Torah in weekly portions; and the Nevi'im, Ketuvim, and Brit Chadashah in sequential daily portions following the Jewish ordering of books. The Megillot & Jonah are taken out of their sequential order and placed in the schedule to be read on, or in preparation of, their associated Holy Day / day of observance.

Instructions for use:

1. It is recommended to use a Bible with the Jewish ordering of books (i.e. TLV or CJB), but a Christian Bible can be used as well.
2. The calendar is divided into weekly sets: with the Torah portion listed; any applicable Holy Day Parashot, Megillot or traditional reading; and a set of daily readings for the rest of the week. Each weekly set gives you 7 days of readings (except the first and last weeks). Note that some Torah portions (doubles) and Megillot are much longer than a typical daily reading and will require more time to read than usual. The goal is to complete each set of weekly readings for that week, however you spread it out.
3. The Torah portion can be read on any day of the week. Some may want to read it on the first day of the week (Sunday) or some may want to read it on Shabbat before or after a service. It allows for flexibility based on preference.
4. The Megillot & Jonah should be read on their designated day or day before (some are read communally during an Erev service). The Holy Day Parashot can be read on any day (similar to the Shabbat Parashot).
5. Note that Shavuot & Yom Kippur have both a Parashah reading and Megillah / traditional reading. Although these have the same date listed the calendar is designed for them to be read on separate days.
