

Will You Do a Double Take This Christmas?

Most of us have heard the Christmas story so often that we have the tendency to stop listening to it. Did you know that the Bible actually tells the story from two different perspectives? Matthew's version has no shepherds and no choir of angels, and Herod is a major character. Luke's version has no wise men and no Herod, and Joseph is (the protagonist in Matthew's version) is mute while Mary not only speaks, she also sings! Other differences abound.

In Double Take, we are presented with both versions: Matthew's in Act 1 and Luke's in Acts 2 and 3. Most Christmas musicals contain characters from both versions, and we hope this "two for the price of one" pageant will make the traditional image even richer and more meaningful.

DIRECTOR'S THANKS

To the Children and their Parents:

Thank you for your patience as I have been navigating my parent's health issues while preparing for the Christmas Musical. You have shown me grace through it all.

I appreciate so much the amount of time and energy you have each sacrificed. I hope in the end, you feel all the trips back and forth from the church for practices were worth it! I hope every child involved feels they had a moment to shine in the spotlight--and hat they feel how much they are deeply loved by our church family!

*In Christ,
Bridget*
