All In

Modern-Day Faith Healers

By Steve Higginbotham

Focus 2026

While a student at Freed-Hardeman College in 1983, I took my wife-to-be to an Oral Roberts healing service in Jackson, TN (I was an exciting date). At the close of the service, Roberts prayed and told us that “God had healed all of us from the top of our heads to the bottom of our feet.” However, after his prayer, as people began to file out, I counted how many, like me, were leaving with their eyeglasses on. It seemed that no one in the assembly was healed of that malady.

Fast-forward 20 years. Richard Roberts, son of Oral Roberts, was scheduled to hold a healing campaign in Toronto, Canada, for more than 2000 followers. However, the event was canceled at the last minute. Do you know why? It was canceled after the World Health Organization issued a travel advisory for Toronto due to the number of SARS cases reported there. Roberts and his organization canceled the event for fear of exposure to the SARS virus. Can you believe that? It seems to me that, if he had the powers he claimed to have, rather than canceling the event, he would have been exactly where he needed to be. Can you imagine Jesus canceling a visit to Samaria because he received word that there were some lepers there, and everyone knows how contagious leprosy is?

Brethren, the modern-day charismatic movement cannot replicate the genuine miracles performed by Jesus and his disciples. Miracles were a powerful gift to the early church intended to confirm the teaching of the disciples (Mark 16:20). But these supernatural gifts were temporary and were not intended to last forever (1 Corinthians 13:8-10).

While we may wish we had such powers today, I’m certain those first-century Christians could wish they had what we have...the complete revelation of God.

Friends, don’t look for confirmation of Jesus’ identity through miracles today. Instead, open your Bible and read the revelation of his will for us (2 Timothy 3:16-17).
