Rethinking Our Privacy Settings

By Mike Green

Chris Ridgeway notes in a 2018 Christianity Today Magazine article that, “by 2020, 4.2 billion digital voice assistants were in use worldwide, with projections reaching 8.4 billion by 2024.” Given the recent rise in AI platforms, I think we’ve probably surpassed that number. These widespread digital microphones have sparked new concerns about privacy and the possibility of being overheard in our homes. I share some skepticism about the assurances that our privacy is always secure. However, I like to believe I live transparently enough that I have nothing to hide. Still, I prefer not to have strangers listening in on my private moments.

Too many Christians act as if they have spiritual privacy settings, unaware that God is completely aware of everything. As David writes in Psalm 139: “Where can I go from Your Spirit? Or where can I flee from Your presence? If I go up to heaven, You are there; if I make my bed in Sheol, behold, You are there. If I fly on the wings of the dawn or dwell in the remotest part of the sea, even there Your hand will guide me, and Your right hand will hold me” (Verses 7-10). It is understandable to care about others respecting our privacy, but it is foolish to think an all-powerful, all-knowing God is unaware of parts of our lives. Does this thought frighten you? It shouldn’t, because God’s nature is different from ours (Cf. Isaiah 55:8-9). While He sees our sins, He also understands our pain and suffering. His lovingkindness always works for our good, even when we doubt His presence (Cf. Romans 8:28). People are understandably concerned about privacy in today’s culture. However, we deceive ourselves when we believe we can throw up a firewall between our God and us! Instead, let us embrace God’s presence and adjust our spiritual privacy settings to reflect more of Him and less of this world.
