

Ideas for Getting Pledges

Make a plan to reach your goal of $900.

Decide how many people you want to ask. Write their names out and set a goal of when you want to contact them. Don't wait too long or someone might beat you to it!

Learn all you can about Extend Global and its ministries.

As always when asking people for money they will want to know why, so be prepared to tell them. Review all of the information that we provided you as well as checking out the website (www.extendglobal.org). We are sure you agree that Extend Global is a valuable ministry, however, some people may have not heard of us. It will be much easier to ask for donations once you know all you can about Extend Global. If someone asks you a question you cannot answer, you may want to refer him or her to one of the phone numbers on the pledge sheet.

Do not forget to ask.

If you get into the habit of asking for a donation wherever you go, it will not be such a hurdle at the end. Some of our golfers like to send donation letter requests.

Everyone is a potential donor.

We are all in daily contact with a lot of people. Ask your family, co-workers, landlord, roommates, friends, co-students, teachers, your boss, corner grocer, anybody and everybody. If 18 people donate $50 each, that will pay for Extend Global to continue sending individuals to the least reached. Extend Global has ministered to thousands, over the past several years. We look forward to seeing that number continue to grow with your support. People like to know what a difference their money will make.

Try clubs, societies, or political groups.

Many of us belong to other groups, clubs, societies, etc. Next time you're at a meeting, pull out your pledge form. You may even want to approach groups you are not affiliated with to get more pledges. Student councils, union locals, religious groups, etc. may be willing to support you.
