Confession of Sin

Lord our God, because we take refuge in you this morning, we freely confess our sins. Though you are our highest good, we have so often rejected your presence, your provision, and your promises. For we have sinned against you in our hearts, with our lips, against our neighbors, and with our possessions. We have been ready to set our hope on the uncertainty of riches, more than on you, the living God. We have forsaken you, the fountain of living waters, and have turned to broken cisterns that can hold no water. We grieve how we have not loved you or listened to your word. Have mercy on us, and restore to us the joy of our salvation through our risen Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. We ask it in his name, AMEN.

Second Helvetic Confessions, Ch. 27

Leader: Forasmuch as God from the beginning would have men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth, therefore, it is necessary that there always should have been, and should be at this day, and to the end of the world, a church.

People: And seeing that there is always but “one God, and one mediator between God and man, Jesus Christ”; also, one shepherd of the whole flock, one head of this body, and to conclude one Spirit, one salvation, one faith, one testament or covenant; it follows necessarily that there is but one church: which we, therefore, call catholic because it is universal, spread abroad through all the parts and quarters of the world, and reaches unto all times, and is not limited within the compass either of time or place.
