MITS BIT’S: It feels good to be back! A couple of weeks away will do that. Karen and I had a great time of rest. We spent time at the cottage and then at home. And in it all we managed to not only be at peace, but to see the beauty of God through His nature and the people He put in our lives. It sometimes overwhelms me when I think about the many relationships I have. I’m sure you all feel that way. God has a plan for us all. His purposes, I assume are largely unknown to us in the moment. I was reminded of this last week. During the holiday I received news that a good friend of my parents had passed away. She was 103 years old! She was a wonderful Christian lady who had a profound impact on my life. I called her Tante Anna. I grew up knowing her and her huge family. There was never a time in my recollection where she was less than a real example of Christ. She cared for people. Her love carried on through to those around her. Only a few people impact a person’s life like that. Tante Anna impacted mine, even if I didn’t really realize it at the time. I realize it now. I can only hope that I can be that way for someone else.
