Have you ever considered the great privilege it is to be a father? Some fathers do not care about this special role called father. This is likely because of a negative experience or poor fatherhood model. Choosing to invest into our children is a privilege worthy of our time and investment. If a person wants to drive they must study for a test and a license is issued if the test is passed, to become a business person one must get some experience before anyone will hire you, and yet to become a father nothing I will put on papers is required. When it comes to being a good father one must make an effort to learn what a healthy father looks like in order to raise our children well. Our young men and young women have different needs that must be met by dad in order for them to have a healthy childhood. The truth is that there is "no one size fits all" approach to raising children. Each child is different and requires a different upbringing to keep from squelching out the lovely spirit God has blessed them with. This is a difficult thing to accomplish in this busy world. Our time is nearly always "not enough" and because of that our children often think we are too busy for them. This is a travesty in our country today! Our children spend more time being invested into by other people than you! What do you suppose will happen when a disagreement occurs between you and your child? Especially on deep moral topics I find children siding with the people who influence them more heavily. If this is a teacher, pastor or close friend who holds the same moral values then perhaps they will influence your child in the same direction as you. What if this influence on your child is not in agreement with your moral standing? Will your child side with you or this other person?

I hope that we parents and especially dads can stand up and raise our children "in the way of the Lord" in hopes that God's word will remain true and "they will not depart far from it." (Proverbs 22:6)

Regardless of your experience of having a father, dads you have a great responsibility to pass on the truth and love of Jesus to your kiddos! Please take this responsibility seriously for the sake of our country, our wives, our children and for the Love of God! Blessings and we wish you a happy Fathers Day! Blessings, Chris
