In Bible times, during the time of David, there was a very wealthy man named Nabal. Nabal was so rich that he owned a thousand goats and a thousand sheep. Sheep and goats, let me hear you. Very nice. You might not be so happy, animal friends, because it's shearing time. Don't worry. We won't really shave all your hair off. This is just a reenactment. Rich man Nabal had a wife named Abigail who was wise and resourceful and beautiful.

When King David heard about the sheep shearing at Nabal's house, he sent his servant with the following message. (To "David's servant") Just move your mouth as I say the words. "Mr. Nabal, we have heard that it's sheep shearing time. King David and his men did not mistreat your servants when we camped near you. Please share some of your feast with us."

(To Nabal) Okay, Nabal, time for you to move your mouth. "Who is this David? Why should I take my food and water which I have worked so hard for and give it to him?" David's servant went right back to David to give him the message. And boy was David was mad! (To David) David said, "Put on your swords," he yelled. David was ready for a fight.

Nabal's servant ran to Abigail and told her that Nabal had insulted King David and refused to share with him. Abigail knew she needed to keep the peace. She wasted no time gathering all kinds of food and treats to take to David and his men. Go ahead and gather some food and treats, Abigail.

When Abigail saw David, she bowed down to him saying, "Lord, blame me. Don't pay attention to Nabal. Take this food as our gift." David saw her good judgment and thanked her for the food. He promised to protect her family and not to attack Nabal and his servants, saying, "Go home in peace." The end.
