You notice a kid is being bullied by another kid in the hallway.

You see an elderly neighbor struggling to sweep her front porch.

Your little brother is having a hard time finishing his homework.

Your mom is tired and there is a full basket of clean clothes that need to be folded and put away.

You notice that your favorite friend in the neighborhood doesn't go to church anywhere.

You see that there is a kid on your soccer team who doesn't have his own pair of shin guards.

You notice that a friend is sad and sitting by himself at recess.

Someone trips a kid in the lunch line and his tray of food spills everywhere. Then other kids start pointing and laughing.

Your friend is sick for the third day in a row.

All the boys on the bus are telling jokes that you know are inappropriate.

You see a woman in a wheelchair at the grocery store struggling to get something off the shelf.

A kid on your baseball team always strikes out when he's up to bat.

Your grandmother is sick.

You notice that the park where you play is littered with lots of trash.
