Building Skills

At this point in the school year, a child in a class for 3-year-olds should be able to recognize their first name. Similarly, a child heading to kindergarten should recognize their name, identify many uppercase letters, and write their name. They should also be able to recognize basic colors and shapes, sit through a story without getting up or interrupting, count to 20, and recognize numbers 1-10. Supporting your child at home with these skills can make a big difference! If you're looking for activity ideas, feel free to ask a teacher—we're always happy to help.
