Dad, it is so hard not to get angry! I just can't do it. Jacob is so mean!

Well, Maria. What did Jesus teach about that?

I know. I should love my enemies. But he makes me so angry!

I know it's hard. But if you trust and love Jesus, He'll change your heart. And loving Jacob will get easier.

The religious leaders of Israel thought they knew what the Law of God meant. In the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus set things straight and taught that the teachers had redefined the Law as a means to achieve righteousness based on works. As Jesus spoke, He pointed out the false teaching—“You have heard it was said.” And then He clarified it with the full, heart-centered, and God-centered meaning of the Law—“But I say to you.” It was soon clear that to the Jews God’s Law was a call to outward appearance and holiness only. But to Jesus, God’s Laws had always demanded both inward and outward holiness.

Throughout this sermon, Jesus pointed out that adherence to the letter of the law is not what God demands. To merely acknowledge that an outward sinful act is wrong without addressing the issue of the heart cannot bring true righteousness. For example, it is not enough to say, “You should not murder.” Jesus challenged His listeners by demanding they not get angry or hate their enemies.

Jesus was showing that in spite of man’s best efforts the Law was humanly impossible to keep. Jesus moved the focus of obedience from the letter of the law to the indwelling condition of the heart. By revealing the heart of man, He showed that God’s standard of righteousness cannot be attained by human efforts alone. He was making it clear that it is not of any works we can do, but salvation is the gift of God through grace. And it is only when we come to Christ in repentance and faith that we are given a new heart and made new creations in Him (2 Corinthians 5:17).

What if you heard someone say that the Bible isn’t for today? What could you say?

The Bible is truth for today and every day. If I wanted to know one thing for sure, it would be who is God and what is He like! The Bible tells us everything God wants us to know about Him. It tells us what God promises believers and what He promises those who turn their backs on Him. It tells us the only way to have real peace and joy on earth, and the only way to have everlasting life with God in heaven after we die. These are very important messages for all people in all time. The Bible has endured for thousands of years. The message in it is timeless because the plan it presents—salvation in Jesus Christ for all who believe—is timeless.
