

Jeremy Cohen

Jeremy Cohen is the Associate Director of Secondary Programs for the North Clackamas School District, and has been using restorative practices in his various roles in K-12 education since 2012. Jeremy has utilized restorative practices as a behavior specialist, Assistant Principal, Principal and in his current role with NCSd where he oversees the discipline process for 17,000 students. Jeremy was motivated to join RJCO's Coordinating Committee both due to increased application of restorative justice in educational settings and from his belief that restorative approaches are the only way to hold students accountable for their actions while maintaining an unwavering belief in their dignity and humanity.
