

MICHAEL LANG

Michael Lang is a filmmaker and editor based in the Pacific Northwest with a background in Cinema Studies and Mass Communications. He has spent more than a decade working in video production, collaborating on projects ranging from small independent shoots to large-scale productions across the United States. Along with helping teams achieve their visual goals, Michael is passionate about using visual storytelling to amplify meaningful perspectives and foster deeper understanding within communities. It has been said that video production is like the infuriating process of “herding cats” so we believe Michael’s strong organizational and communication skills will be a great asset to RJCO’s efforts. With an expanded RJCO committee structure supported by the Coordinator, you will see much more regular communication from us via this newsletter and announcements, RJ Cafe’s, RJCO Member Forums, educational and training opportunities and targeted calls to action.
