

Tristen Edwards

Tristen Edwards is an attorney at Metropolitan Public Defender (MPD). She represents indigent clients on major felony cases and works on policy issues related to promoting the use of restorative justice as an alternative to prosecution. Tristen helped to create the Criminal Justice Commission's Restorative Justice Grant Program and also played an essential role in the establishment of Multnomah County's Restorative Justice Program, which serves as an alternative to prosecution for certain violent felony offenses. Tristen also works on legislative issues related to restorative justice as the chair of the Restorative Justice Coalition of Oregon's Community Action and Advocacy Committee and as a member of Governor Kotek's Racial Justice Council's Criminal Justice Reform Committee.
