MORNING WORSHIP

When Our Name Matters - Genesis 11:1-9

Where did the origin of languages come from? In chapter 10 the peoples and languages are described already before the tower of Babel in Genesis 11. Genesis 10:5 says, "The coastland peoples spread in their lands, each with his own language, by their clans, in their nations."

Genesis 11:1 says, "Now the whole earth had one language and the same vocabulary."

- The solution is to recognize that this is not in chronological order. Moses first describes the spread of the peoples and languages in chapter 10 and then he describes the origin of that diversity in Genesis 11.
- The languages of the world are the judgment of God on sin, and they are designed by God for the global glory of Jesus Christ.

After the flood, God said to Noah in Genesis 9:1, "Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth." That's what chapter 10 describes. It was happening as peoples and languages multiplied. It looked like an obedient fulfillment of God's command. Then Genesis 11 reveals it wasn't obedience. The people weren't spreading. They were clustering. God came down and shattered their disobedience and made their clustering impossible. He confused their language and broke humanity into many peoples and languages.

Building a city is the way one avoids being dispersed over the whole earth. Building a tower into the heavens is the way one makes a name for oneself. The city and tower are the outward expressions of the inward sins. The two sins are the love of praise (so you crave to make a name for yourself) and the love of security (so you build a city and don't take the risks of filling the earth).
