

Paul is a son of the Rio Grande Conference and has been serving in worship and student ministry for several years at churches in the Central Texas, North Texas, and the former Southwest Texas and Rio Grande Conferences of the United Methodist Church. Paul has served as the Conference Director for Contemporary Worship under Rev. Dr. Rusty Freeman and most recently has been Worship Leader at Christ Fellowship UMC (a new church start) in San Antonio. Having a deep belief in the power of Holy Spirit to be at work during the gathered time of corporate worship when the body of Christ yields herself to the Spirit's movement, Paul serves First Methodist Kerrville by providing leadership in musical expressions of worship in the contemporary worship venue, worship design, and all things related to being a worship pastor. He graduated from Texas State University with a degree in Business Management and he received his Master of Divinity from the Perkins School of Theology at SMU. Paul is a fierce lover of coffee, his family, and the church.
