Raising Children

The poet Coleridge was visited by a man who had a theory about raising children. He stated, "I believe children should be given a free rein to think and act and thus learn at an early age to make their own decisions. This is the only way they can grow into their full potential."

Coleridge made no comment but simply led the man to his garden. "Come see my flower garden," he said. The opinionated visitor took one look at the overgrown garden and remarked, "Why, that's nothing but a yard full of weeds."

The wise poet declared, "it used to be filled with roses, but this year I thought I'd let the garden grow as it willed without tending to it. This is the result."

Children, like gardens, will not automatically flourish. They need daily attention and care.
