OLWEUS

Our 7th grade classroom enjoys a tight knit family atmosphere. We have Class Meetings most Fridays and will have emergency meetings to deal with issues that arise and need immediate attention. We sit in a circle on the floor, we begin with the negatives and positives of the week, and follow up with a variety of activities that help students engage and discuss their feelings. Below are some responses to the statement, "What would you like to share about Olweus and our Class Meeting?"

We use a graphic entitled "The Impact of Bullying is Immediate" which describes the feelings of everyone involved. Sarah shares, "I like it because I can see the things that happen from all perspectives. This way I will know how to help someone based on how they are feeling." Divya shares, "The graphic helps us understand how we can help both the bully and the target."

Kimberly and Arthur like the Cube Stories meeting because they like story telling. "It also helps us engage by telling the story, so we know the perspective of things," says Kimberly.

"In general," shares the class, "we like when we have class meetings because it is kind of like having a family meeting because we are all a family. We are NOT scared to share how we feel. Some of us will even share that they like someone, they may not say who it is, but they will share it."

Rebeca expresses, "Something I like about Class Meeting is that we can be open with our classmates and they won't say anything to other people about us. They understand that I have feelings. They can then share their perspective and we can resolve the problem."

Arthur shares, "I like Class Meeting because if we feel bad about doing something then Class Meeting is the time to apologize and make sure we haven't hurt anyone."

Dress Code Reminder

Every year about this time, it is good for us to remember the guidelines for the dress code. Remember the key points are modesty and good repair. If there's a day that someone forgets, we do have extra clothes in the office to help, such as a long top to wear if the child is wearing leggings.

Don't Forget the H&S Popcorn Fundraiser!
Now is the time to sell, sell, sell!
